TAMWORTH.

Rumor says that the Basketball Club, of which Dr. Wm. Carscallen is manager, is planning an At Home in the town in the near future.

Dr. Michell of Perth, has taken up the medical practice recently vacated by Dr. H. W. Wilson.

A company of vaudeville players and comedians have been playing in the township hall this week. They are the best of their kind that have visited Tamworth for some time and appear to be well patronized.

Mr. J. R. Pickering was last week offered the principalship of the Fort Frances Continuation Public School at a salary about $300 in excess of his salary here.

Evangelistic services will be held in the Sand street school house in the near future.

DENBIGH.

Messrs. E. C. Bebee, of North Bay, Wm. Chatson, of Renfrew, Frank Chatson, of Brockville, and Alfred John, of Belleville, former citizens of Denbigh, who spent the open season to kill deer here and at the same time enjoyed a pleasant visit with their parents and other relatives all got their proper share of venison and left last week again for their present homes in town.

Several bears were also shot or trapped this fall in this vicinity.

Among our local young sports Otto Kliem and Wm. Berndt were lucky enough to get a fine deer and a bear each.

Mr. Walter J. Slater sold his village property to Mr. Wm. John, who is retiring from actual farming and intends to move on his newly acquired property in about a week.

Mr. Wm. Warlich, who last spring sold his 200 acre farm here and moved to Berlin, Ont., did not find city life in every respect so desirable as he had anticipated, and arrived here again with his family intending to make Denbigh their future home.

PARCELS SENT OFF TO SOLDIER AT KINGSTON.

Parcels of knitted comforts were sent off this week to the soldiers at Kingston who enlisted here, and have been accepted for the 2nd Canadian Contingent, chocolate and tobacco being added to each parcel to supplement their needs.

PRINCESS MARY'S FUND FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS TO SOLDIERS AT THE FRONT.

It is hoped that this special appeal from the young daughter of our King-Emporer, will result in the raising of $500,000 for the provision of gifts, which is designed to provide each soldier with a Christmas present.

It has been decided to ask the minimum contribution of 10c (or a much more as one may wish to give from each subscriber to this fund).

Therefore, if each member of the U. E. Loyalist Chapter, I.O.D.E., or others wishing to participate in these gifts, will do her part, we can doubtless send a creditable donation from this locality, which should be handed in to the Treasurer, Miss Edn Richardson, by the first week in December.

Though it is well understood that many demands at this time have been cheerfully met, this additional opportunity is only now placed before our people that they may further show their sympathetic co-operation in personal remembrance to our brave defenders.

The following appreciative acknowledgement has been received from Montreal, regarding the gratifying number of mufflers which resulted from the appeal made by Lady French through the Daughters of the Empire.

THE BELGIANS.

The plight of these poor people grows worse as the winter season advances. We are frequently reminded by the press that thousands of Belgians are starving and homeless. Their condition is pitiable and heartrending. Therefore, we must continue to do all in ones power for them, both as regards the forwarding of more clothing, and funds as far as we are able.

As stated in last week's paper the Daughters of the Empire are the authorized recipients of the Belgians re-patriation fund. Anyone wishing to subscribe will find the Treasurer Miss Edna Richardson, very glad to receive donations. Miss Heck will so gladly receive funds towards the purchase of warm clothing for our distressed Allies—the Belgians.

Our weekly work meeting still continues with unabated interest and large attendance. These meetings will be held every Thursday when tea will be served as usual, and the Committee-room will be open as heretofore for the present.

SLAVS BREAK ADVANCE

Great Battle in Poland Turning in Favor of Russia.

Severe Reverse Has Been Inflicted
Upon the Germans at Kutno According to Unofficial Reports—Gumbinnen, in Eastern Prussia Has Been Captured After Five Day Battle—Successes in Galicia.

LONDON, Nov. 24. — The battle which is being fought in the region between the Vistula and Warta river in Poland appears to have turned in favor of the Russians. In fact, a special despatch from Petrograd to Paris says that the Russian army already has won a decisive victory. While this may be an exaggeration, both the Russian and the German official reports suggest that Gen. von Hindenberg's second thrust at Warsaw has been checked.

Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces for two days in succession has recorded partial successes in this great battle and last night the German General Staff says that the arrival of Russian reinforcements has postponed a decision. Both sides have expressed the greatest confidence in the outcome of this battle. Grand Duke Nicholas and Gen. von Hindenberg heretofore have been so successful in their strategy that their adherents look upon them as almost unbeatable.

The German papers only yesterday were talking of a general Russian retirement despite the fact that the Russians have been advancing steadily in Galicia, have repulsed the Austro-German attack before Cracow hold part of the German territory in East Prussia and were opposing Gen. von Hindenberg's advance on Warsaw. It is the same in Petrograd. All the correspondents there declare that it is certain that Russian number must tell when the Germans have reached the ground on which Grand Duke Nicholas has chosen to give them battle.

A Petrograd despatch says, commenting on the heavy fighting at Kutno, that it is now only a question of how many Germans succeed in escaping. The German losses are said to be enormous. At Kutno alone, 12,000 prisoners were taken. Another terrible battle is raging between Czenstochow and Cracow.

German cavalry patrols have penetrated to within thirty miles of Warsaw. Heavy fighting is still in progress between Lowicz and Skierniewice, where the Russian force is opposing the main line of advance of the army of Gen. von Hindenberg.

Russian progress in Galicia against Austria is making steady headway. The situation of the garrison at Przemyśl is said to be desperate, and there have been reports of an offer of capitulation from the commander, reported to have met with refusal by the Russians because it is known that the stronghold must fall ere long. It is not at all unlikely that the status of Russia with relation to the war for many months to come will be established by the operations under way. If the drive of Gen. von Hindenberg should gather renewed impetus and break through to Warsaw, then the Russian position will be perilous, and a withdrawal from Galicia and East Prussia inevitable. The alternative of defeat is even more disastrous to the Germans, who literally must win or fight on their own doorsteps under disadvantages.

ENERGY OF THE SUN.

Intensity of the Light and Heat it Sheds Upon Our Universe.

By a series of curious experiments scientific men have gained a fair idea of the intensity of light and heat from the sun as compared with earthly instruments.

When the sun is at the zenith, or directly overhead, its light is equal to seventy-five electric lights placed only three feet from the observer. Yet an electric light is too dazzling for any one to gaze steadily at it. And as compared with Sirius, which is the brightest in the heavens, the light of the sun is 20,000,000 times more brilliant.

The intensity of solar heat on our globe varies greatly, in a way that sunlight does not, the former being affected by locations, altitudes, changes of the atmosphere and many causes.

It has been estimated, however, that the total quantity of heat which the earth receives from the sun each year is enough to melt a layer of ice covering the entire globe and having a thickness of a hundred feet.

But this is only a very small portion of the whole amount of heat given out by the sun. The total solar heat is enough to melt every day a layer of ice ten and one-half miles thick, about the entire sun, or, to take Professor Tyndall's comparison, the sun's heat emitted in one hour is equal to that produced by burning a seam of coal sixteen and one-half miles thick.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

ported to have met with refusal by the Russians because it is known that the stronghold must fall ere long. It is not at all unlikely that the status of Russia with relation to the war for many months to come will be established by the operations under way. If the drive of Gen. von Hindenberg should gather renewed impetus and break through to Warsaw, then the Russian position will be perilous, and a withdrawal from Galicia and East Prussia inevitable. The alternative of defeat is even more disastrous to the Germans, who literally must win or fight on their own doorsteps under disadvantages.

As for the Russian advance in East Prussia, Petrograd despatches report the capture of Gumbinnen, in north-eastern Prussia by the Czar's armies.

Although official despatches only mention skirmishes in East Prussia, a despatch from a correspondent with the active army reports, with circumstantial details, the Russian capture of Gumbinnen after a battle lasting five days, the Cossacks being the heroes of the most stirring incident of the struggle, capturing the enemy's batteries by a daring charge which put the gunners to flight.

The German defenders declined to await a bayonet attack and the Russians entered in triumph to discover the town half demolished by shell fire and abandoned by the population.

Gumbinnen is about midway between Stalluponen, a point near the Russian frontier, which was captured after a stiff resistance by the Germans, and Insterburg, the latter an important railroad junction. Insterburg is believed to be the next objective of the Russian attack, and in the hands of the Czar would constitute a valuable base for operations against Koenigsburg, the principal city and fortress of East Prussia.

No Appointment Made.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—With regard to the revival of the rumor that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., is to be appointed Canadian High Commissioner in London, in succession to the late Lord Strathcona, it is stated here that no appointment will be made until Hon. George H. Perley returns, and it is unknown when that will be. He may not leave London until the end of the war.

The suggestion that Sir Thomas may be made High Commissioner receives high favor in official circles, and undoubtedly his appointment would receive very general approval.

Two Are Reported Safe.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 24.—Alarm for the safety of the steamers Sinaloa, Nipigon and Niko, which were feared to have met disaster with the C. F. Curtis and her barges in last Thursday's storm was dispelled yesterday afternoon when at least two of the vessels were reported under skelter. No hope, however, is held out for any members of the crews of the ill-fated Curtis, Annie M. Peterson and S. E. Marvin.

NEW ASSAULT BEGINS

Germans Vigorously Bombard
Ypres Soissons and Rheims.

Belgian Town Held by British Is Now
In Flames and German Generals Are Believed To Be About to Make Another Effort at Ypres to Break Through Line — Kaiser's Soldiers Chafe Under Long Delay.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The latest advices from France say that the town of Ypres, Belgium, held by the British, and the cities of Rheims and Soissons, in France, have been subjected to a heavy bombardment from hostile artillery, and that Ypres is in flames. The public markets, the cathedral and the belfry, the latter begun in 1200 and completed in 1304, are on fire. This bombardment is believed to herald another tremendous assault by the Germans in an attempt to accomplish at Ypres what has failed at Nieuport, Dixmude and elsewhere.

The following official communication was issued last night by the French War Office:—

"To-day, as yesterday, there was cannonading in the north and in the direction of Soissons and Rheims.

"In the Argonne there were violent attacks by both sides which, however, were without results."

The French Government issued the following communique Monday afternoon:—

"Yesterday was marked by a violent artillery fire. The enemy directed his attention particularly to the town of Ypres, where the belfry, the cathedral, the markets and a number of houses were set on fire, to Soissons and to Rheims.

"In the Argonne the day was characterized by very hot fighting. The enemy delivered very spirited attacks, which were repulsed. In the Woivre and the Vosges the situation is without change."

The bombardment of Rheims and Soissons is believed to be an effort to turn the attention of the French from the vigorous campaign which they are prosecuting along the Meuse, and on the Lorraine frontier, where fresh successes are being achieved daily by the armies of the republic. It may also be intended to cover the transfer of German troops from the western to the eastern front.

There is a recrudescence of activity along the Belgian coast and British warships were engaged yesterday in a vigorous exchange with German land batteries. The extent of this action cannot be learned, but all reports agree that the Kaiser is evidently bent on another try at Dunkirk. Heavy guns have been mounted from Nieu-port to Knocke, and the entire population of the latter town and Zeebrugge have been moved to Bruges.
They were not allowed to rendezvous in Holland, but were coerced in going to Bruges. This place is declared to be garrisoned for the most part by German troops suffering from trifling wounds. Similar reports of a wholesale exodus from St. Nicholas, a city of 40,000 people, between Antwerp and Ghent, comes by way of Holland. The German military officials have ordered every one in the town to move to Antwerp instantly, where they will be provided with quarters. The order is imperative, and is said to have specified that no one must remain in St. Nicholas.

Submarine U18 Is Rammed by British Patrol Ship.

British Destroyer Garry Comes Alongside Just In Time to See German Boat Rise to the Surface and Display a White Flag—All the Germans Are Saved But One—German Destroyer Lost.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Secretary of the Admiralty announces that the German submarine boat U-18, which was reported off the north coast of Scotland yesterday morning, was rammed by a British patrolling vessel and foundered.

The patrolling ship rammed the submarine at 12.20 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The U-18 was not seen again until 1.20, when she appeared on the surface flying a white flag.
Shortly after this she foundered just as the British destroyer Garry came alongside. The destroyer rescued three officers and twenty-three of the submarine's crew, only one being drowned.

The names of the German officers captured are Captain Lieut. von Henning, Engineer Lieut. Sprenger and Lieut. Neuerberg.

The submarine boat U-18 of the German navy was built in 1912. She had a cruising radius of 2,000 miles and a speed of fourteen knots above water and eight knots submerged.

to have to make a refusal to be Russians because it is known that the stronghold must fall ere long. It is not at all unlikely that the status of Russia with relation to the war for any months to come will be established by the operations under way. The drive of Gen. von Hindenberg could gather renewed impetus and break through to Warsaw, then the Russian position will be perilous, and withdrawal from Galicia and East Russia inevitable. The alternative of defeat is even more disastrous to the Germans, who literally must win or fight on their own doorsteps under disadvantages.

As for the Russian advance in East Russia, Petrograd despatches report the capture of Gumbinnen, in northern Prussia by the Czar's armies. Although official despatches only mention skirmishes in East Prussia, a despatch from a correspondent with an active army reports, with circumstantial details, the Russian capture of Gumbinnen after a battle lasting five days, the Cossacks being the heroes of the most stirring incident of the struggle, capturing the enemy's batteries by a daring charge which left the gunners to flight.

The German defenders declined to await a bayonet attack and the Russians entered in triumph to discover the town half demolished by shell fire and abandoned by the population. Gumbinnen is about midway between Stalluponen, a point near the Russian frontier, which was captured after a stiff resistance by the Germans, and Insterburg, the latter an important railroad junction. Insterburg is believed to be the next objective of the Russian attack, and in the hands of the Czar would constitute a valuable base for operations against Koenigsburg, the principal city and fortress of East Prussia.

No Appointment Made.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—With regard to the revival of the rumor that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., is to be appointed Canadian High Commissioner in London, succession to the late Lord Strathcona, it is stated here that no appointment will be made until Hon. George H. Perley returns, and it is known when that will be. He may leave London until the end of the year.

The suggestion that Sir Thomas may be made High Commissioner receives high favor in official circles, and undoubtedly his appointment would receive very general approval.

Two Are Reported Safe.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 24.—Alarm for the safety of the seamen Sinaloa, Nipigon and Niko, which were feared to have met disaster with the C. F. Curtis and her crew in last Thursday's storm was spelled yesterday afternoon when at least two of the vessels were reported under shelter. No hope, however, is held out for any members of the crews of the ill-fated Curtis, Anne M. Peterson and S. E. Marvin.

In Holland, but were coerced into going to Bruges. This place is declared to be garrisoned for the most part by German troops suffering from trifling wounds. Similar reports of a wholesale exodus from St. Nicholas, a city of 40,000 people, between Antwerp and Ghent, comes by way of Holland. The German military officials have ordered every one in the town to move to Antwerp instantly, where they will be provided with quarters. The order is imperative, and is said to have specified that no one must remain in St. Nicholas.

A despatch from Thielt, Belgium, says:—

"There are clear indications that 'General November' will take a leading part in the operations along the front by the Yser river. The days of cold wet weather have been followed by three days of frost over the entire territory outlined by the cities of Middelkerke, Thourout, Thielt, Ronlers and Ypres. Much of this region is covered with stubble fields, over which there is a coating of ice, making them almost impassable for man or beast.

"The German troops are living in the ruins of two scores of villages and small cities. They are becoming impatient at the delay and are suffering from icy winds which penetrate the windowless buildings in which they seek some sort of shelter. They would prefer a general attack to finish the battle, but any such sudden movement is prevented by the inundation along the front.

"The Germans are awaiting with great hopes the arrival of engineers, whose duty it will be to find some means of crossing the inundated territory, but the methods which are to be employed, if decided upon, are being kept secret."

TROOPS MOVE WEST.

Russian Trans-Siberian Railway Crowded With Troop Trains.

PEKIN, Nov. 24.—Passengers coming to Peking by way of the Trans-Siberian Railroad unite in declaring that there have been remarkable changes along this line of travel since the beginning of the war.

Vodka and other intoxicants, usually for sale at every small station, are now nowhere to be had. Almost every hour of the day and night troop trains were encountered going westward, while other trains carrying crowds of Austrian prisoners are moving eastward to Siberia. A telegraphic news service from the Government press bureau is delivered twice a day to every station along the line.

Mexican Outlook Better.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Anxiety for the safety of British and French subjects and their interests in Mexico City brought Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, and Jules Jusserand, the French Ambassador, to the State Department yesterday to learn what the American Government knew of the situation in the Mexican capital. Reports to the State Department showed conditions as having improved.

Shortly after this she foundered just as the British destroyer Garry came alongside. The destroyer rescued three officers and twenty-three of the submarine's crew, only one being drowned.

The names of the German officers captured are Captain Lieut. von Henning, Engineer Lieut. Sprenger and Lieut. Neuerberg.

The submarine boat U-18 of the German navy was built in 1912. She had a cruising radius of 2,000 miles and a speed of fourteen knots above water and eight knots submerged.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Copenhagen says the Danish steamer Anglodane collided Sunday night in the Ore Sund with the German torpedo-boat destroyer S-124, which foundered.

Another Copenhagen despatch says: The collision occurred in the Baltic Sea outside Falsterbo, Sweden. Two German torpedo boats went to the assistance of the destroyer as she was about to sink, and a majority of the crew was taken aboard them. Three of the men were rescued by the Anglodane, but one of them, the chief engineer, did a half-hour later.

The destroyer was towed by one of the torpedo boats to the Swedish coast, where she will be disarmed. The injured boat carried no lights. The Anglodane sustained no damage in the collision.

The German torpedo-boat destroyer S-124 was built in 1903. She was of 6,500 horsepower, and had a speed of 28 knots. She carried a crew of about sixty men.

FOOTBALL IN DISGRACE.

Fifteen Thousand at London Match Did Not Yield Single Recruit.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Indignation against the hitherto universally popular game of football is expressed by nearly the entire British press yesterday, because almost no men enlisted as a result of the recruiting rallies at Saturday's matches.

"It is time to eradicate the football cancer," says The Pall Mall Gazette, in an article which goes on to say that not a single man was recruited at London's principal football match, which was attended by 15,000 spectators. A colonel who lost a son at the front and was himself returning to the firing line, appeared at this game and pleaded with the men to enlist. His words were drowned by shouts which greeted the appearance of the teams.

In other parts of the country the same stolid refusal greeted the bands of speakers and recruiting officers.

The Westminster Gazette says that there is only one way in which the football association can put itself right in the eyes of the public, and that is by discontinuing its program.

AFRAID TO RETREAT.

German Retirement in Belgium Would Make Nation Despondent.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A despatch from Copenhagen says that it has been learned in German military circles that, despite the serious situation on the eastern frontier, the Germans have not diminished their strength in the western theatre.

The Germans will not give up their position in northern France and West Flanders, unless it becomes vitally necessary, for such action would cause the spirits of the German people to fall so low that revolution might follow.

The Germans are expected to increase rather than diminish their efforts to get Calais in consequence of the Kaiser's special command. On account of the strategical and political importance of Calais, the Germans will disregard the cost in human life that its capture entails.

Jamaica Cable Was Cut.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The official information bureau announced yesterday that a message from the Governor-General of Jamaica declares that there was interruption in the cable communication with Jamaica early in August of this year, which at the time was thought to be due to an earthquake.

It is now known that the Jamaica cable was cut by hostile cruisers on Aug. 3 at 6.40 a.m., before the declaration of war.

To Probe Copper Supplies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—To maintain successfully her right to seize or detain cargoes of American copper carried on American or other neutral vessels to a neutral country, such as Italy in the south, or Holland in the north of Europe, Great Britain apparently finds it necessary to establish the probability that copper actually is destined for Germany, or Austria, or even Turkey.

One means of establishing this probability is to demonstrate that there has been an increase in the imports of copper to any neutral country in excess of the normal requirements of that country, as tending to prove that the surplus copper, or a corresponding quantity already in the country, has been allowed to pass across its borders into a belligerent country.

A BATH IN AUSTRIA

It Was Full of Surprises For the Visiting Englishman.

JOHANN WAS TOO ATTENTIVE.

The Valet Was Only Doing as He Would Have Done Had His Master, the Prince, Been in the Guest's Place, but It Jarred the Briton's Nerves.

Although I live in England, which is supposed to be the home of aristocratic privilege, says a contributor to Chambers' Journal, I had no true conception of the meaning of the words until I visited some Austrian friends at a great castle some five hours' journey from Vienna.

It was a tropically hot day, and the train was crowded, but when the conductor found that I was going to visit Prince A. he cleared my compartment of passengers and did all he could to make me comfortable. At the little station the peasants stood with bared heads while I made my way to the waiting carriage, and as we rushed through the village hats were raised and the street was cleared for our galloping steeds.

At the castle I was shown to a room in one of the turrets, where I found the jager who had met me at the railway station unpacking my luggage. But the first essential was a bath. He was full of "desolation," but something had gone wrong with the water pipes in the turret, and therefore the bathroom could not be used, but if the high and well born excellency would condescend to use a hip bath he would instantly bring one. The bath was brought and prepared, but the tall jager still remained in the room.

"You can finish the unpacking afterward," I said. "I will ring when I have had my bath."

Johann turned from an open drawer, his face blank with amazement. "But is it not the high and well born excellency that I should wash?" he asked.

The German of the "high and well born excellency" failed him. There was a pause; then, after a repeated declaration that I would ring when I wanted him, Johann left the room clearly under protest. "I shall be outside the door if the high and well born one should need me," he said reproachfully.

I was no more than in the bath when the door opened and the stalwart figure appeared. "Is it not cold water over the back of the high and well born excellency that I should pour?"

"No; certainly not!" The door closed again protestingly.

A few seconds later Johann came into the room with an air of triumph, bearing a large bath towel. "Ah, the splashing is over! Now the high and well born excellency I may be permitted to dry."

But he was not even permitted the high and well born excellency to dry.

"What will my prince say?" he said, looking at me in bewilderment. "His serene highness commanded me to show the excellency every attention, and the excellency will allow me to do nothing for him—nothing."

At dinner I sat next to the Princess Karl, the wife of the eldest son. A

CURE FOR OLD AGE FLIGHT OF A COMET

Easy and Pleasant and Costs but Little to Try It. Its Wild Race Through Space and the Speed It Attains.

A GOOD WAY TO CHEAT DEATH. CRASHING INTO THE EARTH.

The Prescription Is to Mix Open Air and a Hobby, Shake Well and Take as Many Hours a Day or Night as Possible—The Cure In Real Life.

Old age can be cured. The prescription is a simple one. Mix open air and a hobby, shake well and take as many hours a day as possible. No one begins to age until he is bored, and the first gray hair comes when a man suddenly thinks to himself, "What's the use?" Then is the time when a hobby makes life interesting again.

There was an official on one of our great railroads who was retired at seventy. "He'll die now," said his friends kindly. But he didn't. Instead, he became interested in the wild flowers, and now he is too busy in looking for the ram's head orchid and trying to find a new station for the hart's tongue fern and tramping around in the woods and fields in all kinds of weather even to think of dying. Anyway, he would not have time until he's finished his monograph on the willows of the United States.

There is a woman in Baltimore, seventy-two years old, who years ago sought to forget a great sorrow by learning the butterflies. Her city home has become a rendezvous for entomologists all over the world and houses a famous collection. While her contemporaries are dozing their lives away in caps and easy chairs she spends her summers in the mountains and her winters in Florida with a butterfly net. Twenty-one new species to identify are her contribution to the lepidoptera, and she plans to live until the last goal of an entomologist is reached—the using of her single initial species.

An octet of men in Philadelphia, all well past their threescore years, some in business and some foot loose, belong to the same ornithological society. They are afire every day of the year, rain or shine, to watch the ever changing bird life. In the spring each prepares migrant sheets showing the arrivals of the hundred odd migrants that pass through every place every

What the Result Would Be if One of These Light but Massive Wanderers of the Sky Were to Swing Into a Head-on Collision With Our Planet.

A large part of the fear that great comets have always inspired is due to an instinctive dread of their tremendous power for evil. They look like besoms of destruction, and those who know nothing about astronomy accept them at their apparent face value.

And, in truth, if they could come within hitting distance of the earth they would do an enormous amount of damage, and some of them might be capable of putting the earth temporarily out of commission as an inhabited globe.

The terror that was aroused in many quarters by Halley's comet in 1910 is sure to recur on the appearance of any new comet, so that it is worth while to consider what an evilly disposed comet could do to the earth if it got a chance.

There are two ways in which a comet could cause damage to the earth—first, by running straight into it with 15,000 times the velocity of an express train and, second, by infecting the atmosphere with the poisonous or stifling gases contained in its tail.

Let us consider the first case of a comet shock.

Two things have to be taken into account—namely, the velocity and the weight of the colliding comet, considered as a gigantic projectile shot against the earth as a target.

Comets are very deceptive in regard to weight or mass. They are enormously large, but relatively very light. The comet that appeared in 1861 first grazed the sun and then swept the earth with its tail.

Halley's comet also occupied vastly more space than the earth, but a careful estimate has shown that it probably did not weigh more than 30,000,000 tons, which is much less than the weight of the material excavated to make the Panama canal.

It might be thought, then, that the earth is in no more danger from such winters in Florida with a butterfly net. Twenty-one new species to identify are her contribution to the lepidoptera, and she plans to live until the last goal of an entomologist is reached—the using of her single initial species.

An octet of men in Philadelphia, all well past their threescore years, some in business and some foot loose, belong to the same ornithological society. They are afire every day of the year, rain or shine, to watch the ever changing bird life. In the spring each prepares migrant sheets showing the arrivals of the hundred odd migrants that pass through every place every year. There is great rivalry as to who shall score the most warblers or identify the largest number of birds in one day. At present writing the oldest of the eight holds a record of seventy-five different kinds of birds seen or heard in one day between dawn and dark—one for each year of his age and one to grow on.

A man in North Carolina by the sudden death of two of his family was left alone with but little money, no friends and the cheering dictum from his doctor that he had only a year to live. To while away the few months still left to him as well as to help out his household expenses he took up the study of edible mushrooms. At the end of a year in the open he notified his indignant physician that he had become too much interested in his hobby to confirm his diagnosis. In ten years he has discovered, classified and tested 170 kinds of edible mushrooms and has published a book which is one of the standard authorities for mushroom eaters of the world.

Another septuagenarian attributes his long life to the stars. Confined to business during the day, he sought the open air at night and began to study the changing constellations and the perplexing planets. Then he found that with an opera glass he could detect their colors and revel in the blue light of Vega, the green glare of Sirius, the rose red of Aldebaran, the flame color of Rigel and the strange shades of other gleaming sky kings. Finally he bought a small telescope. Now, at seventy, he has published a monograph on the double stars, besides a quaint little star guide that has interested thousands in his hobby.

None of the nature studies requires much money or time. A cheap illustrated guidebook, an opera glass and, if possible, some walks and talks with an expert, and you will learn almost immediately to identify a score or more of flowers, or birds, or constellations, or mushrooms, and you will have found a hobby on which you may ride away from death.

Try it, young men, lest you grow old. Try it, old men, before you grow tired. Escape into the open from these narrow indoor days and learn the way to where the wild folk dwell. In their land you will find the help of the hills and hope wide as the world, and strength, and youth, and happiness. Try it.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Lippincott's.

against the earth as a target. Comets are very deceptive in regard to weight or mass. They are enormously large, but relatively very light. The comet that appeared in 1861 first grazed the sun and then swept the earth with its tail.

Halley's comet also occupied vastly more space than the earth, but a careful estimate has shown that it probably did not weigh more than 30,000,000 tons, which is much less than the weight of the material excavated to make the Panama canal.

It might be thought, then, that the earth is in no more danger from such a comet than a battleship is from a boy's bean shooter. But now the velocity begins to come into play. The speed of a comet at the earth's distance from the sun would be about twenty-six miles per second.

A mass of 30,000,000 tons shooting through space at a velocity of twenty-six miles per second would develop in round numbers about twenty quintillion foot pounds of energy, equivalent to the development in one second of thirty-six thousand million million horsepower.

Where the comet struck everything—rock, soil, vegetation—would be melted, vitrified and even vaporized in an instant, for all this tremendous energy would be turned into heat through the sudden and complete arrest of the swift motion of the comet. The 600 quintillions of "absolute units of energy" developed by the stopping of the comet would furnish enough heat to liquefy more than a million million tons of solid iron!

The result would be a very big and a very deep hole in the earth. Thousands of square miles would be more or less directly affected by the terrific impact, for the shock would be greater than that of the mightiest earthquake, and perhaps buildings would tumble into ruin and mountains would shake off their fringes of rock in all parts of the globe, while the sea would hurl itself in whelming tidal waves upon every coast and drown all the low lying islands.

The atmospheric disturbances would also be enormous. The sudden development of great heat at the point of collision would unbalance the air currents and destructive and capricious winds would blow to and fro over the earth.

We have only a little space left to consider the effects of a collision between the earth and the tail of a comet. This is something that has actually occurred two or three times within a century. As already said, the comet of 1861 enveloped the earth with the spreading end of its tail for a few hours, and in 1910 Halley's comet brushed its tail over the earth, but apparently the electric repulsion developed prevented the gases of the tail from entering the atmosphere. It is possible that in every case this would occur, so that electricity may be our effective guardian against deleterious substances that might otherwise be introduced into the atmosphere from the switching tails of close passing comets.—Garret P. Serviss in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Destroying Equilibrium.
"That former enemy of yours is paying you a great many compliments."
"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "and I wish he'd quit it. One of the easiest ways to throw a man down is to swell his head until he gets top heavy."—Washington Star.

A few seconds later Johann came into the room with an air of triumph, bearing a large bath towel. "Ah, the splashing is over! Now the high and well born excellency I may be permitted to dry."

But he was not even permitted the high and well born excellency to dry. "What will my prince say?" he said, looking at me in bewilderment. "His serene highness commanded me to show the excellency every attention, and the excellency will allow me to do nothing for him—nothing."

At dinner I sat next to the Princess Karl, the wife of the eldest son, a beautiful Hungarian who possessed all the charm and vivacity of her race. "I'm afraid you are not being properly looked after," she said. "Johann told my husband that you ordered him out of the room."

"But he wanted to wash me," I explained. "He was most attentive, but that was an attention I did not desire."

"Poor Johann!" answered the princess. "He was much upset. He is Karl's special servant and was told to look after you on purpose. You see, he did not understand. He always washes Karl."

I made no attempt to conceal my astonishment, and when I glanced at Prince Karl, a broad shouldered giant, I could not help smiling.

"Why are you amused?" the princess asked.

"It seems so incongruous," I answered, "Prince Karl being washed!"

But I afterward learned that it is the usual custom for the Austrian nobility to be thoroughly well scrubbed in their baths twice a day by their valets and dried afterward with hot towels. They are also dressed by their servants. The driving of poor Johann from my bedroom became a great joke in the family. Prince Karl declared that he had never dressed himself in his life.

"I tried it only once," said one of his brothers, an officer in the Imperial guards, "when my servant was ill and I had to go to a parade. I put all the buttons in the wrong buttonholes and got confined to barracks for a week in consequence."

In the old days the Austrian princes, counts and barons were sovereign lords on their own lands, which they held from the emperor in return for military service. Each of these great nobles held his own court, which was a reflection in miniature of the imperial court, and as it was considered an honor by men of the highest birth to assist at the toilet of the monarch, so it was considered an honor by those of lesser degree to render similar personal service to the great nobles. The dependence of their descendants upon their valets is only the survival of those feudal customs.

Little minds are too much wounded by little things; great minds see all and are not even hurt.—La Rochefoucauld.

Inductive and Deductive.

who have learned rightly to divi the Word of Truth—who have learned from the Scriptures that the vine Plan is progressive, in which successive ages form links—can understand the workings of Divine providences. If all Christians could awake to a proper study of the Bible could see the object of the Divine dealings with the Jews during the Jewish Age, with Christians during this Gospel Age, and with the world during the incoming Millennial Age they would see that each Age has its seed time and harvest, after which that Age, having served its purpose passes away, giving place to another Age and a different work.

For instance, in the end of the Jewish Age a peculiar testing came to that people, while John the Baptist was preaching—a separating the "chaff" from the "wheat," gathering of the "wheat" into the garner of the next Age, and the punishment of trouble upon the chaff class, which utterly destroyed the as a nation. In Matthew 13:24, 30 the Master declares that in the end of this Age there will be a separation of "wheat" from "tares," the form being gathered into the Kingdom. Messiah, the latter being consumed tares, though not as individuals. The destruction of a "tare," an imitator Christian, signifies that the person posing as a Christian, drawn nigh to God with his lips only, will cease to make such a profession.

"In the Evil Day."

Next was pointed out that according to Scripture the present is the time which the Apostle designated "the evil day." Throughout the Bible this period is set forth as the time when "wheat" and "tares" will be thoroughly separated. It seems difficult for most people to realize that they should be in the midst of fulfillments of prophecy. Familiar with present-day conditions, many shut their eyes to the great changes going on around us.

St. Peter, speaking of our day, says that they "are willingly ignorant." Indeed, the majority do not wish to know. Imbued with the worldly spirit, many professing Christians are different to what the Lord causes to be written for their assistance in the evil day. Such are not of "the Elect." These, St. Paul shows, will not be in darkness, that that Day should overtake them as a thief. They will be earnest, vigilant, standing firm in the faith.

Our Lord declared that the trial our time would be so crucial that, possible, it would "deceive the very Elect." But this will not be possible for they will seek the assistance which God has promised. Through the Prophet David Jehovah foretold the special trials of our day, picturing Satan's various devices—Satanism, Higher Criticism, Christian Science—as "pestilences" and "arrows." He tells that thousands shall fall amongst those whom we have considered most favored and as our friends in the Lord.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 23.—Winnipeg wheat opened $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ to $\frac{3}{4}$ ¢ lower, oats $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ to $\frac{3}{4}$ ¢ lower, and flax was irregular, 1¢ lower to 1¢ higher. Trading was quiet, a light volume of business in options being transacted. The demand for all grades of cash wheat continues good, with exporters buying to fill space, and offerings on the light side. In oats, No. 2 C.W., and Nos. 1 and 2 feed were the grades wanted, the others being slow. The low grades of barley were also in demand. Some export sales were worked this morning, one firm selling from sixty to seventy thousand bushels during the early hours. Fluctuations were generally in narrow limits. Quite a sharp advance from low points occurred at the close on brisk demand by millers in the south and reports of heavy export sales, added to which there were damage reports from Argentina.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—There was no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers for grain today, and business in consequence was dull. The domestic demand for coarse grain was fair, and prices generally were maintained. There was a fair enquiry from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour today, but as the prices bid were 2d to 6d per sack below what millers were asking, no sales were made. The local trade is fair. Demand for millfeed is active, and a large volume of business is doing. There is no change in the condition of the market for butter, prices being steady and business quiet. The enquiry for cheese continues good, but owing to the scarcity of ocean room no business was reported. Exports for the week, 31,723 boxes, compared with 33,228 a year ago. Demand for eggs is good, and prices for new-laid at 3¢ per dozen higher. The exports for the week were 30,365 cases. Potatoes stronger at an advance of 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ to 5¢ per bag, with a

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Belleville, N.S., Canada.—"I doctored for ten years for female troubles and did not get well. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I write now to tell you that I am cured. You can publish my letter as a testimonial."

— Mrs. SUVRINE BABINE, Belleville, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Another Woman Recovers.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."

— Mrs. WILLIAM H. GILL, No. 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ABLE TO WITHSTAND IN THE EVIL DAY

"Watch Ye, Stand Fast in the Faith, Quit You Like Men."

The Present Scripturally Designated "The Evil Day"—A Time of Thorough Testing—Special Trials of Faith and Obedience—Difficult to Stand—Need For "the Whole Armor of God."

PASTOR RUSSELL

Nov. 15.—Pastor Russell's discourse to-day was based upon the text, "Take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the Evil Day, and having done all, to stand."—Ephesians 6:13

The Pastor opened his discourse by saying that only those who have learned rightly to divide the Word of Truth—who have learned from the Scriptures that the Di-

The Pastor explained that his text was much in harmony with Psalm 91, and indicates a need for "the armor of God," a difficulty in withstanding the assaults of this Day, and the fewness of those who will eventually stand. St. Paul's exhortation is that Christians take "the whole armor of God"—not merely the shield of faith, not merely the helmet of salvation, not merely the breastplate of righteousness, not merely the Sword of the Spirit, not merely the sandals of preparation, not merely the girdle of Truth, but all of these. Whoever will stand will need every piece.

Many declare that it makes no difference what we believe—truth or falsehood—that the Lord will determine our standing by our works. But the Bible forbids this thought, and assures us that none can have works pleasing to God because all are imperfect. The Divine proposal is that during this Gospel Age He will reward faith accompanied with works to the extent of ability, and reckoned perfect through the imputed merit of Christ.

Each should examine himself and discern whether he loves and serves a creed of the Dark Ages or whether he is devoted simply to the Word of God. Whoever receives God's Truth in the love of it will to the best of his ability and judgment show it to others, whatever the cost may be, and thus will demonstrate that he is a child of God. Whoever fails to do so will surely find his course injurious

THE ERA OF GLASS.

It May Come After Our Iron Ore Deposits Are Exhausted.

The iron ore deposits of the world are being rapidly exhausted, and the time is not far distant when we will have to get along without iron and steel. Before that day arrives some substitute for these valuable things will have to be found, and it has been suggested by a scientist familiar with the subject that the logical successor will be glass.

Glass can be made to meet nearly all the requirements of iron and steel and with improved methods of manufacture will be a great deal cheaper. There is an abundant supply of the materials from which glass is made, and long before iron reaches the obsolescent stage it is more than likely that glass will be one of its strongest competitors.

The chief fault with glass is its brittleness, but it is possible even now to produce a grade of glass which can stand a great deal of hard usage and serve many of the purposes for which iron is employed. The progress of invention is bound to evolve a quality of glass which will be as strong and durable as iron and transparent as well.

The use of glass will effect a great improvement in sanitary conditions. The building of the future, according the text, "Take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand."—Ephesians 6:13

The Pastor opened his discourse by saying that only those who have learned rightly to divide the Word of Truth—who have learned from the Scriptures that the Divine Plan is progressive, in which successive ages form links—can understand the workings of Divine providences. If all Christians could awake to a proper study of the Bible, could see the object of the Divine dealings with the Jews during the Jewish Age, with Christians during his Gospel Age, and with the world during the incoming Millennial Age, they would see that each Age has its seed time and harvest, after which that Age, having served its purpose, passes away, giving place to another age and a different work.

For instance, in the end of the Jewish Age a peculiar testing came so that people, while John the Baptist was preaching—a separating of the "chaff" from the "wheat," a gathering of the "wheat" into the garner of the next Age, and the permission of trouble upon the chaff, which utterly destroyed them as a nation. In Matthew 13:24, 37, the Master declares that in the end of this Age there will be a separation of "wheat" from "tares," the former being gathered into the Kingdom of Messiah, the latter being consumed as chaff, though not as individuals. The destruction of a "tare," an imitation Christian, signifies that the person posing as a Christian, drawing nigh to God with his lips only, will cease to make such a profession.

"In the Evil Day."

Next was pointed out that according to Scripture the present is the time which the Apostle designates the evil day." Throughout the Bible his period is set forth as the time when "wheat" and "tares" will be thoroughly separated. It seems difficult for most people to realize that they should be in the midst of fulfillments of prophecy. Familiar with present-day conditions, many shut their eyes to the great changes going on around us.

St. Peter, speaking of our day, says that they "are willingly ignorant." Indeed, the majority do not wish to now. Imbued with the worldly spirit, many professing Christians are indifferent to what the Lord caused to be written for their assistance in this evil day. These are not of "the very elect." Such, St. Paul shows, will not be in darkness, that that Day would overtake them as a thief. They will be earnest, vigilant, standing fast in the faith.

Our Lord declared that the trial of our time would be so crucial that, if possible, it would "deceive the very elect." But this will not be possible; for they will seek the assistance which God has promised. Through the Prophet David Jehovah foretold the special trials of our day, picturing Satan's various devices—Spiritism, Higher Criticism, Christian Science—as "pestilences" and "arrows." He tells that thousands shall fall—amongst those whom we have considered most favored and as our friends in the Lord.

The Armament of Truth and correct. The Divine proposal is that during this Gospel Age He will reward faith accompanied with works to the extent of ability, and reckoned perfect through the imputed merit of Christ.

Each should examine himself and discern whether he loves and serves a creed of the Dark Ages or whether he is devoted simply to the Word of God. Whoever receives God's Truth in the love of it will to the best of his ability and judgment show it to others, whatever the cost may be, and thus will demonstrate that he is a child of God. Whoever fails to do so will surely find his course injurious to himself.

Let us hearken to the Apostle's words, "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men." Seek the old paths—not the paths and theories of the Dark Ages and their horrible "doctrines of evils," but the doctrines of Jesus and His Apostles, that your faith should not stand in the doctrines of men, but in the power of God.

CURIOUS CLIFF HOUSES.

Queer Prehistoric Dwellings in Mesa Verde National Park.

The Mesa Verde National park is situated in southwestern Colorado and may best be reached from Mancos. Within the park are many notable prehistoric ruins, the cliff dwellings comprising a group of great importance to the study of American archaeology. The principal and most accessible ruins are the Spruce Tree House, Cliff Palace, Balcony House and Tunnel House.

Spruce Tree House is located in the head of Spruce Tree canyon, a branch of Navajo canyon. It originally contained about 130 rooms, built of dressed stone laid in adobe mortar, with the outside tiers chinked with chips of rock and broken pottery.

Cliff Palace is located about two miles east of Spruce Tree House, in a left branch of Cliff canyon, and consists of a group of houses with ruins of 140 rooms, including twenty round kivas or ceremonial rooms and a tapering loop-holed tower forming a crescent of about 100 yards from horn to horn, which is reputed to be one of the most famous works of prehistoric man in existence.

Balcony House, a mile east of Cliff Palace, in Ruin canyon, contains about twenty-five rooms, some of which are in almost perfect condition.

Tunnel House, about two miles south of Spruce Tree House, contains about twenty rooms and two kivas, connected by an elaborate system of underground passages, and a burial ground of 5,000 square feet. In each of these villages is an elaborate system of fortification, with in some cases walls 2.3 feet thick and twenty feet high, watchtowers thirty feet high and blockhouses pierced with small loopholes for arrows.

Summer Fruit Salad.

A delicious hot weather salad is this: Boil three-quarters of a cupful of water with half a cupful of sugar for fifteen minutes. Cool it and add a few drops of lemon juice and a spoonful of vanilla.

Prepare fresh fruit—bananas, grapes, pineapples, pears, peaches or any other seasonable fruits—and place it on lettuce leaves. Pour the cold syrup over the fruit just before serving.

BELATED RECOGNITION.

Plaint of a Woman Who Was Shadowed by a Detective.

"Acquaintance with a detective is not the good thing some people may imagine," said a young woman who has never yet been accused of being an adventuress or anything else that is supposed to get one's name on the front pages of the newspapers.

"A few months ago I was robbed of a belt that I prized very highly because it was unique and cannot be duplicated. I spent considerable money and had the assistance of a headquarters detective, but without recovering the belt.

"That was all well enough, but the other day as I was walking down Broadway I saw Mr. Detective. He saw me, too, and remembered that he had seen me somewhere, but had evidently forgotten the circumstances. He 'shadowed' me for a block; then when I turned into a store he slipped into a doorway and waited for me to come out. Again he shadowed me till I turned into my doorway.

"At that point he seemed to suddenly remember that he had known me as a client, not as a victim, for as I looked back he seemed to have a sheepish look in his face as he turned and walked rapidly away."

New York's First Mayor.

The first mayor of New York, Thomas Willett, was inducted into office in June, 1665. Governor Richard Nicolls, the first English executive of the future Empire State, was responsible for the appointment of Willett, who was a wealthy merchant and trader and had a town house in New York and a country estate in Rhode Island, where his body was buried in 1674. Willett, who was a shrewd business man, governed New York honestly and well and after his first term of one year was made mayor again in 1667. The municipal government of which he was the head was composed of five aldermen, three Dutch and two English, and a sheriff, although police duties devolved largely upon the mayor, and he was police magistrate as well.

A Wonderful Drummer.

Probably the most remarkable drummer who ever lived was Jean Henri, the famous tambour major of the Emperor Napoleon. One of his feats was to play on fifteen different toned drums at the same time in so soft and harmonious a manner that instead of the deafening uproar that might have been expected the effect was that of a novel and complete instrument. In playing he passed from one drum to the other with such wonderful quickness that the eyes of the spectators could hardly follow the movement of his hands and body.

GERMAN CULTURE.

"Our German culture we must bear to lands benighted everywhere." So say the Germans as excuse for turning howling war dogs loose. Then they upon some sleeping town, their messenger of death drop down; the dreaming children thus are slain, and German culture scores again. "Our culture," say the German scribes, "will elevate all human tribes; we'll purify their darkened souls, and shoot their churches full of holes; when their cathedrals storied grand, are laid in dust at our command, and German shrapnel bursts and whines among their worshipped saints and shrines, they'll bless the culture we have brought, and wonder why they ever fought!" Their culture teaches German knights to overlook all human rights. "The bond that bears our hand and seal mere paper is, when martial zeal inspires us to the bloody fray—a form," the German statesmen say. "Our solemn compact is a fake, and all our oaths we gayly break; all contracts and all vows must yield, when German culture is afield." No wonder that the Germans grieve, since nations simply won't receive the blessing that they would bestow, and look upon them as a foe!

THE PATRIOTIC FUND COMMITTEE VISIT THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

The members of the Lennox and Addington Patriotic Fund Committee attended the County Council on Thursday morning. His Honor Judge Madden lucidly explained the course of the committee, the amount of subscriptions received and the amounts paid out up to the present time. While the committee are satisfied that they have ample funds to meet all obligations for some considerable time, the committee consider that the public should not again be asked to make further contribution and should the war continue, further funds will be absolutely necessary. The committee therefore, asks the County Council to stand at the back of the Committee and be prepared to largely supplement the efforts of the committee should the need arise, and grant the committee the necessary funds to carry on the work next year, or the committee would be willing to turn their funds over to the county and have the county administer the fund and make provision for any further funds that may be necessary. Mr. W. J. Doller and Mr. W. A. Grange gave short reports of the finances as they are at present and the amounts that are being expended to insure the lives of all volunteers from the county and afford relief to all those dependants of volunteers who are in need of assistance.

Rev. A. L. Howard and Rev. W. E. Kidd also addressed the council.

The council passed a resolution to the effect that the council would grant the committee such money as may be necessary from time to time, to enable the committee to fully carry out the work they have undertaken.

RAID WAS SUCCESSFUL.

Aviators Seriously Damaged Zeppelin Sheds After All.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—It was announced officially yesterday afternoon that the British aviators who, Saturday afternoon raided Friedrichshafen, on Lake Constance, report positively that all the bombs thrown by them reached their objective and that serious damage was done to the Zeppelin airship factory.

Details were given in the House of Commons by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

"Commander Briggs is reported to have been shot down," said Mr. Churchill, "and to have been taken wounded, to a hospital, as a prisoner. The two other officers, Flight Commander Babington and Lieut. Sippe, returned safely to French territory, although their machines were damaged by the fire of the enemy. They report positively that all of the bombs reached their objective, and that serious damage was done to the Zeppelin factory."

"This flight of 250 miles, penetrating 120 miles into Germany across a mountainous country under difficult weather conditions, constitutes, together with the attack, a fine feat of arms."

Another Raid Made.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The British aviators who attempted to destroy the Zeppelin headquarters at Friedrichshafen on Saturday are said here today also to have made an attack on the buildings at Manzell, to the west of Friedrichshafen, which are used for the housing of dirigibles. The attack was without results.

A LETTER FROM THE FIRING LINE

The following letter has been received by Mr. Fred Barrett, from his brother who is serving with the English army in Belgium, and will undoubtedly prove interesting reading to our many subscribers:

5 Royal Irish Lancers,
3rd Cavalry Brigade,
British Expeditionary Force
Belgium.

Dear Fred—Have you received the letter and post card that I sent you some time ago. I have received letter from Amy, also some cigarette and Mother sent me some too, I am in "clover" for a time.

You can see by the above address where I am. Have been in Belgium about a week. We are following the steps of the retreating German. Such sights to see, ruin and desolation everywhere. The people in England or Canada have little idea what war really means. I sent you a post card of a Chateau two days ago, it is where I am writing this letter. Such a lovely place and beautifully furnished, about the best I have been in, and I have seen quite a lot in France and here, as headquarters always billet us in some desert mansion. The Germans did not have time to destroy or wreck this one, we were too close on their heels, but they have been heavily reinforced about four miles north of here, as they have put up a stubborn resistance, and are still holding back our troops.

There has been some hard fighting in this district since last Sunday. We had to fall back into an entrenched position, owing to the superior numbers, and as I write the letter the artillery are keeping up terrific cannonading, so that the windows in the house are rattling. Don't know whether we shall have to retire again or not. I hope we don't as it is heart breaking to go back through the villages, which we have passed through in our advance, and see the expressions on the faces of the few remaining inhabitants.

The presence of our troops seems to restore their hopes, and they give such a welcome, and cannot seem to do enough for us. Of course they cannot give us anything in the shape of food, as everything of any value at all, had previously been looted by the Germans.

We have been reinforced by some native Indian troops, and a fine bunch of men they are, but up to the time of writing this letter, they have not been in action. We have heard of a great Russian victory, and it has relieved our minds somewhat, as the Germans seem to have things a little of their own way around Antwerp, but of course, there were only a small number of British and Belgian troops opposing them.

All our troops are just longing to get to Germany. There will be something doing, as we intend to put them back in their own coin. We are all confident of getting there, although we fully realize what a long hard struggle is ahead of us. Our regiment has been at headquarters for the last few days. We have been extremely lucky, as regards casualties, about nineteen killed, including two officers. Our Colonel and Al Burslem were wounded during the retreat from Mons. That was an awful time, I never want to see the like again. The Colonel is in England but Alf only went into the Field

REVENUE CUTTER SERVICE.

How It Came to Be Placed Under the Treasury Department.

The United States revenue cutter service is a military arm of the government attached to and under the direction of the treasury department. The service was organized in 1790 and constituted the original naval force of the country. There was at that time no navy department, and the service was placed under the treasury department, where it has remained ever since.

It is charged with the enforcement of the navigation and customs laws of the United States, the assistance of vessels in distress, the protection of the sealing industry in Alaska, the enforcement of the quarantine laws, the destruction of derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation and numerous other duties appropriate to its class of vessels. Each winter, by direction of the president, a number of the cutters patrol the coast for the special purpose of assisting vessels in distress.

The service co-operates with the navy when directed by the president and has so co-operated in every war in which the United States has been engaged. It is sometimes called the revenue marine service, but revenue cutter service is the proper name. There are forty-three cutters in the service, and they carry from one to five or six guns each.

We have been extremely lucky, as regards casualties, about nineteen killed, included two officers, Our Colonel and Burslem were wounded during the treat from Mons. That was an aw time, I never want to see the again. The Colonel is in England but Alf. only went into the Fi Hospital for a few days and came back to the front again. It was plucky of him, as there was a who were wounded not any more than he was, who were sent back England. I had a letter from Mot the other day and she says that received a letter from Charlie and seems anxious to get into the fire line, to have a slap at the Germans but he need not worry about that there will be lots of them left spite of their heavy losses. The Germans are simply throwing away their men. Do you know that the feel of our men is that we would terribly disappointed if peace was declared before we had a chance to get on German territory. I know myself, that if I had a chance to go home tomorrow, I would not come as I want to see the end, if I spar I just want to see what sort of Empire the Germans will have when we get through with them. That can be only one result, of that are all confident, and all we hope that the Allied Powers will not them off too lightly.

No doubt you are wondering what can tell you so much in this letter I dare not say at present, but I tell you some other time. I would have told you more in my previous letter, but it would not have reached you if I had. I am sending you some extracts of diaries found in German prisoners, also a few counts of some of the engagements that our regiment took part in. Send them on to Father when they are finished with them. Be very careful, as they are strictly confidential. Must close now. With best wishes

5,000,000 WILL BE DISTRIBUTED IN ONTARIO DURING THE NEXT TWO WEEKS.

Fifty Thousand Dollars for Consumptives has been raised by the Xmas Seal Campaigns for the Muskoka Free Hospitals for Consumptives. This represents the sale of five million cent seals. The Xmas Seal Campaign is again in full swing. Lawyers, teachers, merchants, manufacturers, ministers, Sunday school scholars, cadets, Y.M.C.A.—all kinds of organizations will again be busy this year. Advance copies just to hand show that the new design of Christmas Seal is attractive and the literature powerful. War conditions—widespread poverty and distress, falling with greatest weight upon those afflicted by consumption and in need—the things make the Christmas Seal Campaign, not only desirable but urgent necessary. "Buy them. Use them. Help on the good work." This slogan will appeal to everybody. Everybody should help. Supplies may be obtained direct from the Headquarters of the National Sanitarium Association, corner College and Ross streets, Toronto.

LETTER FROM THE FIRING LINE

The following letter has been received by Mr. Fred Barrett, from his brother who is serving with the English army in Belgium, and will undoubtedly prove interesting reading to our many subscribers:

5 Royal Irish Lancers,
3rd Cavalry Brigade,
British Expeditionary Force,
Belgium.

Dear Fred—Have you received the letter and post card that I sent you some time ago. I have received a letter from Amy, also some cigarettes and Mother sent me some too, so I'm in "clover" for a time.

You can see by the above address where I am. Have been in Belgium about a week. We are following in the steps of the retreating Germans. No sights to see, ruin and desolation everywhere. The people in England or Canada have little idea of what war really means. I sent you post card of a Chateau two days ago, it is where I am writing this letter. Such a lovely place and beautifully furnished, about the best I have been in, and I have seen quite a few in France and here, as headquarters always billet us in some deserted mansion. The Germans did not have time to destroy or wreck this one, as they were too close on their heels, but they have been heavily reinforced out four miles north of here, and they have put up a stubborn resistance, and are still holding back our troops.

There has been some hard fighting in this district since last Sunday. I had to fall back into an entrenched position, owing to their superior numbers, and as I write this the artillery are keeping up a terrific cannonading, so that the windows in the house are rattling. I don't know whether we shall have to retreat again or not. I hope we don't, it is heart breaking to go back through the villages, which we had used through in our advance, and the expressions on the faces of the few remaining inhabitants.

The presence of our troops seem to restore their hopes, and they give us a warm welcome, and cannot seem to get enough for us. Of course they can give us anything in the shape of food, as everything of any value that had previously been looted by the Germans.

We have been reinforced by some fine Indian troops, and a fine body of men they are, but up to the time of writing this letter, they have not been in action. We have heard of a Russian victory, and it has rested on our minds somewhat, as the Germans seem to have things all their own way around Antwerp, but of course, there were only a small number of British and Belgian troops opposing them.

All our troops are just longing to get to Germany. There will be something doing, as we intend to pay them back in their own coin. We are confident of getting there, although we fully realize what a long and hard struggle is ahead of us. Our command has been at headquarters the last few days. We have been extremely lucky, as regards casualties, about nineteen killed, including officers. Our Colonel and Alf. were wounded during the retreat from Mons. That was an awful day, I never want to see the like again. The Colonel is in England, Alf. only went into the Field Hospital for a few days and came

GERMANY MUST ASK FOR PEACE.

It is perfectly futile for Germany to take roundabout ways of bringing the war to an end: if she really wants peace she must ask for it. The United States' offer of intervention early in the war was not accepted by the allies, and no other offer of the same sort, or for the same purpose would have any better result, no matter from what power it might emanate. This war was of Germany's seeking, and when she becomes thoroughly tired of it she can let the allied Governments know without indirection.

Before she does this, however, she had better, with a view to expedite matters, decide what her irreducible minimum is to be. Talking at large would be of no use, except to give Germany a chance to recuperate, and that will certainly not be allowed to her on any plea whatever. In this war the fighting will go on concurrently with the pourparlers, until the Russian army is in Berlin, and perhaps also the allied armies of the west. The only way to prevent what would be a catastrophe from the German point of view is to be frank in admitting collapse and in discussing conditions of peace.

Mr. Asquith, who certainly spoke with authority, stated publicly a few days ago some of the terms on which the Allies will insist: militarism must be abolished in Europe; "small nations" must be allowed to develop in their own way without foreign molestation, and there must be some way found of preventing any one nation from trying to dominate the others. There must be a general and customary "propriety" of behavior among the powers which shall be binding on all, so that if one feels at liberty to behave in an overbearing way the others will have a recognized right to call it to account. There must be no more reliance on the "balance of power," or the "European concert," or any other traditional device to keep the peace among the nations; and international tribunal of some sort must be found.—Globe.

"The boy is shown pictures of marching armies and of fighting ships of every description. He is not bored with technical scenes, first, because he is too young; and, second, because wonders of machinery of intricate manufacture are hardly novelties to the Chinese mind.

"What may happen then is, as you say, on the knees of the gods—we say that also; but if ever the millions upon millions of China become civilized and capable of taking the initiative like Europeans—well, there will indeed be something of a Yellow Peril.

"Chinamen, properly armed, properly drilled, and instilled with the lust of conquest, could sweep Europe even as the Tartars, who became Teutons, did in the days of Atilla. I am an educated Chinaman, was sent to Europe for schooling. Fortunately for 'foreign devils'—perhaps for us also, you are thinking—there are not many of us who are educated."

They were sisters-in-law and reasonably well disposed toward each other. One was the mother of George, aged six months, and the other was the mother of Marian, aged six months and four days.

"Marian does not seem to grow very fast," said the mother of George, with a suggestion of commiseration in her tones. "George is much taller"—(height being measured in inches).

"Perhaps he is," replied the mother of Marian coldly, "but Marian weighs more."

"Oh, well," responded the sister-in-law, with a smile of high bred superiority, "of course I should not wish George to be gross."

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Copyright, 1915, by Kate Douglas Wiggin

"The Wilsons don't know yet that Mark is married to her, but I met him driving like Jehu, just after I had left Patty, and told him everything that had happened and did my best to cool him down and keep him from murdering his new father-in-law by showing him it would serve no real purpose now."

"Did he look married and all different?" asked Rod curiously.

"Yes, he did, and more like a man than ever he looked before in his life. We talked everything over together, and he went home at once to break the news to his family without even going to take a peep at Patty. I couldn't bear to have them meet till he had something cheerful to say to the poor little soul. When I met her by Uncle Bart's shop she was trudging along in the snow like a dragged but-terfly and crying like a baby."

Sympathetic tears dimmed Rodman's eyes. "I can't bear to see girls cry, Ivory. I just can't bear it, especially Patty."

"Neither can I, Rod. I came pretty near wiping her eyes, but pulled up, remembering she wasn't a child, but a married lady. Well, now we come to the point."

"Isn't Patty's being married the point?"

"No, only part of it. Patty's being sent away from home leaves Waitstill alone with the deacon, do you see? And if Patty is your favorite, Waitstill is mine. I might as well own up to that."

"She's mine, too," cried Rod. "They are both my favorites, but I always thought Patty was the suitablest for me to marry if she'd wait for me. Waitstill is too grand for a boy."

"She's too grand for anybody, Rod. There isn't a man alive that's worthy to strap on her skates."

"Well, she's too grand for anybody except"—and here Rod's shy, wistful voice trailed off into discreet silence.

"Now, I had some talk with Patty, and she thinks Waitstill will have no trouble with her father just at present. She says he wished so much rage upon her that there'll be none left for anybody else for a day or two. And, moreover, that he will never dare to go too far with Waitstill because she's so useful to him. I'm not afraid of his beating or injuring her so long as he keeps his sober senses, if he's ever rightly had any. But I don't like to think of his upbraiding her and breaking her heart with his cruel talk just after she's lost the sister that's been her only companion." And Ivory's hand trembled as he filled his pipe. He had no confidant but this quaint, tender-hearted, old-fashioned little lad, to whom he had grown to speak his mind as if he were a man of his own age, good chance he'd send a boy with a note and get him to put it under the stone gate post. It's too soon to expect it perhaps, but I can't seem to keep still."

Rodman tied a gingham apron around his waist, carried the teakettle to the sink and poured the dishpan full of boiling water, then dipped the cups and plates in and out, wiped them and replaced them on the table, gave the bean platter a special polish and set the half mince pie and the butter dish in the cellarway.

"A boy has to do most everything in this family," he sighed to himself. "I don't mind washing dishes, except the nasty frying pan and the sticky bean pot, but what I'm going to do tonight is different"—here he glowed and tingled with anticipation—"I know what they call it in the story books—it's sentry duty, and that's braver work for a boy than dish washing."

Which, however, depends a good deal upon circumstances and somewhat on the point of view.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The House of Aaron.

A FEELING that the day was to bring great things had dawned upon Waitstill when she woke that morning, and now it was coming true.

Climbing Saco hill was like climbing the hill of her dreams; life and love beckoned to her across the snowy slopes.

At rest about Patty's future, though troubled as to her sorry plight at the moment, she was conscious chiefly of her newborn freedom. She reveled in the keen air that tingled against her cheek and drew in fresh hope with every breath. As she trod the shining pathway she was full of expectancy, her eyes dancing, her heart as buoyant as her step. Not a vestige of confusion or uncertainty vexed her mind. She knew Ivory for her true mate, and if the way to him took her through dark places it was lighted by a steadfast beacon of love.

At the top of the hill she turned the corner breathlessly and faced the length of road that led to the Boynton farm. Mrs. Mason's house was beyond, and, oh, how she hoped that Ivory would be at home and that she need not wait another day to tell him all and claim the gift she knew was hers before she asked it! She might not have the same exaltation tomorrow, for now there were no levels in her heart and soul. She had a sense of mounting from height to height and lightning fires on every peak of her being. She took no heed of the road she was traveling. She was conscious only of a wonderful inward glow.

The house was now in sight, and a tall figure was issuing from the side door, putting on a fur cap as it came out on the steps and down the lane. Ivory was at home, then, and, best of all, he was unconsciously coming to meet her, although their hearts had been coming to meet each other, she thought, ever since they first began to beat.

As she neared the bars she called Ivory's name. His hands were in the pockets of his great coat, and his eyes were fixed on the ground. Somber he was, distinctly somber, in mien and gait. Could she make him smile and flush and glow as she was smiling and flushing and glowing? As he heard her voice he raised his head quickly and uncomprehendingly.

"Don't come any nearer," she said,

"I've worshiped you ever since I was a boy. I've kept my heart swept and garnished for you and no other, hoping I might win you at last."

How glorious to hear all this delicious poetry of love and to feel Ivory's arms about her, making the dream seem sure!

"Oh, how like you to shorten the time of my waiting!" he went on, his words fairly chasing one another in their eagerness to be spoken. "How like you to count on me, to guess my hunger for your love, to realize the chains that held me back and break them yourself with your own dear, womanly hands! How like you, oh, wonderful Waitstill!"

Ivory went on murmuring phrases that had been lying in his heart unsaid for years, scarcely conscious of what he was saying, realizing only that the miracle of miracles had happened.

Waitstill, for her part, was almost dumb with joy to be lying so close to his heart that she could hear it beating, to feel the passionate tenderness of his embrace and his kiss falling upon her hair.

"I did not know a girl could be so happy!" she whispered. "I've dreamed of it, but it was nothing like this. I am all a-tremble with it."

Ivory held her off at arm's length for a moment, reluctantly, grudgingly. "You took me fairly off my feet, dearest," he said, "and I forgot everything but the one supreme fact you were telling me. Had I been on guard I should have told you that I am no worthy husband for you, Waitstill. I haven't enough to offer such a girl as you."

"You're too late, Ivory! You showed me your heart first, and now you are searching your mind for bugbears to frighten me."

"I am a poor man."

"No girl could be poorer than I am."

"After what you've endured you ought to have rest and comfort."

"I shall have both—in you!" This with eyes, all wet, lifted to Ivory's.

"My mother is a great burden—a very dear and precious but a grievous one."

"She needs a daughter. It is in such things that I shall be your helpmate."

"Will not the boy trouble you and add to your cares?"

"Rod? I love him; he shall be my little brother."

"What if my father were not really dead? I think of this sometimes in the night! What if he should wander back, broken in spirit, feeble in body, empty in purse?"

"I do not come to you free of burdens. If my father is deserted by all I must see that he is made comfortable. He never treated me like a daughter, but I acknowledge his claim."

"Mine is such a gloomy house!"

"Will it be gloomy when I am in it?" and Waitstill, usually so grave, laughed at last like a care-free child.

Ivory felt himself hidden in the beautiful shelter of the girl's love.

It was dark now, or as dark as the night ever is that has moonlight and snow. He took Waitstill in his arms again reverently and laid his cheek against her hair. "I worship God as well as I know how," he whispered, "worship him as the maker of this big heaven and earth that surrounds us. But I worship you as the maker of my little heaven and earth, and my heart is saying its prayers to you at this very moment!"

"Hush, my dear! Hush! And don't value me too much or I shall lose my head—I that have never known a was—though he had a bit of the h in him, at bottom, too—embracing I waist fondly and bristling with w doring questions.

"Is she really going to stay with for always, Ivory?" he asked.

"Every day and all the days, every night and all the nights. 'Praise G from whom all blessings flow!' " said Ivory, taking off his fur cap and opening the door of the living room. "I've got to wait for her a whole fo night, Rod. Isn't that a ridiculous snail of a law?"

"Patty didn't wait a fortnight."

"Patty never waited for anything," Ivory responded, with a smile. "E she had a good reason, and, alas, haven't, or they'll say that we have. And I am very grateful to the sa dear little Patty, for when she got herself a husband she found me a wife!"

Rodman did not wholly understand this, but felt that there were mysteries attending the love affairs grownup people that were too complicated for him to grasp, and it did seem to be just the right moment for questions.

Waitstill and Ivory went into Mr. Boynton's room quietly, hand in hand and when she saw Waitstill she raised herself from her pillow and held her arms with a soft cry of delight.

"I haven't had you for so long, long!" she said, touching the girl cheek with her frail hand.

"You are going to have me every day now, dear," whispered Waitstill, with a sob in her voice, for she saw change in the face, a new transparency, a still more ethereal look than had been there before.

"Every day?" she repeated longingly.

Waitstill took off her hood and knelt on the floor beside the bed, hiding her face in the counterpane to conceal her tears.

"She is coming to live with us, dea Come in, Rod, and hear me tell he Waitstill is coming to live with us! Isn't that a beautiful thing to happen to this dreary house?" asked Ivory, bending to take his mother's hand.

"Don't you remember what you thought the first time I ever came here, mother?" and Waitstill lifted her head and looked at Mrs. Boynton with swimming eyes and lips that trembled. "Ivory is making it all come true, and I shall be your daughter!"

Mrs. Boynton sank farther back into her pillows and, closing her eyes, gave a long sigh of infinite content. Her voice was so faint that they had to stoop to catch the words, and Ivory, feeling the strange benediction that seemed to be passing from his mother's spirit to theirs, took Rod's hand and knelt beside Waitstill.

The verse of a favorite psalm was running through Lois Boynton's mind and in a moment the words came clearly as she opened her eyes, lifted her hands and touched the bowed heads. "Let the house of Aaron not say that his mercy endureth forever!" she said slowly and reverently. An Ivory, with all his heart, responded "Amen!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Aaron's Rod.

IVORY! Ivory!" Ivory stirred in a sleep that had been troubled by too great happiness. To travel a drear, path alone, a path leading seemingly nowhere, and then suddenly to have a companion by one's side, the very sight of whom enchanted the eye, the very touch of whom delighted the senses—what joy unspeakable! What could sleep soundly when wakeful on her that there'll be none left for anybody else for a day or two. And, moreover, that he will never dare to go too far with Waitstill because she's so useful to him. I'm not afraid of his beating or injuring her so long as he keeps his sober senses, if he's ever rightly had any. But I don't like to think of his upbraiding her and breaking her heart with his cruel talk just after she's lost the sister that's been her only companion." And Ivory's hand trembled as he filled his pipe. He had no confidant but this quaint, tender-hearted, old-fashioned little lad, to whom he had grown to speak his mind as if he were a man of his own age, and Rod, in the same way, had gradually learned to understand and sympathize.

"It's dreadful lonesome on Town House hill," said the boy in a husbed tone.

"Dreadful lonesome," echoed Ivory with a sigh; "and I don't dare leave mother until her fever dies down a bit and she sleeps. Now, do you remember the night that she was taken ill, and we shared the watch?"

Rodman held his breath. "Do you mean you're going to let me help just as if I was big?" he asked, speaking through a great lump in his throat.

"There are only two of us, Rod. You're rather young for this piece of work, but you're trusty—you're trusty!"

"Am I to keep watch on the deacon?"

"That's it, and this is my plan: Nick will have had his feed. You're to drive to the bridge when it gets a little darker and hitch in Uncle Bart's horse shed, covering Nick well. You're to go into the brick store, and while you're getting some groceries wrapped up, listen to anything the men say, to see if they know what's happened. When you've hung about as long as you dare leave your bundle and say you'll call in again for it. Then see if Baxter's store is open. I don't believe it will be, and if it isn't look for a light in his kitchen window and prow about till you know that Waitstill and the deacon have gone up to their bedrooms. Then go to Uncle Bart's and find out if Patty is there."

Rod's eyes grew bigger and bigger. "Shall I talk to her?" he asked, "and what'll I say?"

"No, just ask if she's there. If she's gone Mark has made it right with his family and taken her home. If she hasn't why, God knows how that matter will be straightened out. Anyhow, she has a husband now, and he seems to value her, and Waitstill is alone on the top of that wind swept hill!"

"I'll go. I'll remember everything," cried Rodman, in the seventh heaven of delight at the responsibilities Ivory was heaping upon him.

"Don't stay beyond 8 o'clock, but come back and tell me everything you've learned. Then, if mother grows no worse, I'll walk back to Uncle Bart's shop and spend the night there just—just to be near, that's all."

"You couldn't hear Waitstill, even if she called," Rod said.

"Couldn't I? A man's ears are very sharp under certain circumstances. I believe if Waitstill needed help I could hear her breathe! Besides, I shall be up and down the hill till I know all's well, and at sunrise I'll go up and hide behind some of Baxter's buildings till I see him get his breakfast and go to the store. Now wash your dishes." And Ivory caught up his cap from a hook behind the door.

"Are you going to the barn?" asked Rodman.

"No, only down to the gate for a minute. Mark said that if he had all, he was unconsciously coming to meet her, although their hearts had been coming to meet each other, she thought, ever since they first began to beat.

As she neared the bars she called Ivory's name. His hands were in the pockets of his great coat, and his eyes were fixed on the ground. Sombre he was, distinctly sombre, in mien and gait. Could she make him smile and flush and glow as she was smiling and flushing and glowing? As he heard her voice he raised his head quickly and incomprehensibly.

"Don't come any nearer," she said, "until I have told you something."

His mind had been so full of her that the sight of her in the flesh, standing twenty feet away, bewildered him.

She took a few steps nearer the gate, near enough now for him to see her rosy face framed in a blue hood and to catch the brightness of her eyes under their lovely lashes. Ordinarily they were cool and limpid and grave, Waitstill's eyes. Now a sunbeam danced in each of them. And her lips, almost always tightly closed, as if she were holding back her natural speech—her lips were red and parted, and the soul of her, free at last, shone through her face, making it luminous with a new beauty.

How Glorious to Feel Ivory's Arms About Her.

"I have left home for good and all," she said. "I'll tell you more of this later on, but I have left my father's house with nothing to my name but the clothes I stand in. I am going to look for work in the mills tomorrow, but I stopped here to say that I'm ready to marry you whenever you want me—if you do want me."

Ivory was bewildered, indeed, but not so much so that he failed to apprehend and instantly, too, the real significance of this speech. He took a couple of long strides, and before Waitstill had any idea of his intentions he vaulted over the bars and gathered her in his arms.

"Never shall you go to the mills. Never shall you leave my sight for a single hour again, my one woman in all the world. Come to me to be loved and treasured all your life long."

Ivory felt himself hidden in the beautiful shelter of the girl's love.

It was dark now, or as dark as the night ever is that has moonlight and snow. He took Waitstill in his arms again reverently and laid his cheek against her hair. "I worship God as well as I know how," he whispered, "worship him as the maker of this big heaven and earth that surrounds us. But I worship you as the maker of my little heaven and earth, and my heart is saying its prayers to you at this very moment!"

"Hush, my dear! Hush! And don't value me too much or I shall lose my head—I that have never known a sweet word in all my life save those that my sister has given me. I must tell you all about Patty now."

"I happen to know more than you, dear. I met her at the bridge when I was coming home from the woods and I saw her safely to Uncle Bart's door. I don't know why we speak of it as Uncle Bart's when it is really Aunt Abby's! I next met Mark, who had fairly flown from Bridgton on the wings of love, arriving hours ahead of time. I managed to keep him from avenging the insults heaped upon his bride, and he has driven to the Mills to confide in his father and mother. By this time Patty is probably the center of the family group, charming them all, as is her custom."

"Oh, I am so glad Mark is at home! Now I can be at rest about Patty. And I must not linger another moment, for I am going to ask Mrs. Mason to keep me overnight!" cried Waitstill, bethinking herself suddenly of time and place.

"I will take you there myself and explain everything. And the moment I've lighted a fire in Mrs. Mason's best bedroom and settled you there, what do you think I am going to do? I shall drive to the town clerk's house, and if he is in bed, rout him out and have the notice of our intended marriage posted in a public place, according to law. Perhaps I shall save a day out of the fourteen I've got to wait for my wife. 'Mills,' indeed! I wonder at you, Waitstill! As if Mrs. Mason's house was not far enough away, without your speaking of 'mills.'"

"I only suggested mills in case you did not want to marry me," said Waitstill.

"Walk up to the door with me," begged Ivory. "The horse is all harnessed, and Rod will slip him into the sleigh in a jiffy."

"Oh, Ivory, do you realize what this means?"—and Waitstill clung to his arm as they went up the lane together—"that whatever sorrow, whatever hardship comes to us neither of us will ever have to bear it alone again?"

"I believe I do realize it as few men could, for never in my five and twenty years have I had a human creature to whom I could pour myself out, in whom I could really confide, with whom I could take counsel. You can guess what it will be to have a comprehending woman at my side. Shall we tell my mother? Do say 'yes.' I believe she will understand. Rod, Rod, come and see who's stepping in the door this very minute!"

Rodman was up in his bedroom, attiring himself elaborately for sentry duty. His delight at seeing Waitstill was perhaps slightly tempered by the thought that flashed at once through his mind—that if she was safe he would not be required to stand guard in the snow for hours as he had hoped. But this grief passed when he fully realized Waitstill's presence at the farm at this unaccustomed hour really meant. After he had been told he hung about her like the child that he

she said slowly and reverently. At Ivory, with all his heart, responded "Amen!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Aaron's Rod.

IVORY! Ivory!" Ivory stirred in a sleep that had been troubled by too great happiness. To travel a dreary path alone, a path leading seeming nowhere, and then suddenly to have companion by one's side, the very sight of whom enchanted the eye, the very touch of whom delighted the senses—what joy unspeakable! Why could sleep soundly when wakened brought a train of such blissful thoughts?

"Ivory! Ivory!" He was fully awake now, for he knew his mother's voice. In all these years, ever thoughtful of his comfort and of the constant strain upon his strength, Lols had never wakened her son at night.

"Coming, mother, coming!" he said when he realized she was calling him. And, hastily drawing on some clothing, for the night was bitterly cold, came out of his room and saw his mother standing at the foot of the stairway with a lighted candle in her hand.

"Can you come down, Ivory? It is a strange hour to call you, but I have something to tell you—something have been piecing together for weeks something I have just clearly remembered."

"If it's something that won't keep till morning, mother, you creep back into bed and we'll hear it comfortably," he said, coming downstairs a leading her to her room. "I'll smother the covers, so; beat up the pillows there!—and throw another log on the sitting room fire. Now, what's the matter? Couldn't you sleep?"

"All summer long I have been trying to remember something—something untrue that you have been believing some falsehood for which I was responsible. I have pursued and pursued it, but it has always escaped me. Once it was clear as daylight, for Rodman read me from the Bible a plain answer to all the questions that tortured me."

"That must have been the night that she fainted," thought Ivory.

"When I awoke next morning from my long sleep the old puzzle had come back a thousand times worse than before, for then I knew that I had been the clew in my own hand and had lost it. Now, praise God, I know the truth and you, the only one to whom I can tell it, are close at hand!"

Ivory looked at his mother and saw that the veil that had separated the mentally seemed to have vanished the night that had passed. Often a often it had blown away, as it were for the fraction of a moment and then blown back again. Now her eyes were his with an altogether new clearness that startled him, while her breath came with ease and she seemed stronger than for many days.

"You remember the winter I was here at the farm alone when you were at the academy?"

"Yes. It was then that I came home and found you so terribly ill. Do you think we need go back to that old time now, mother dear?"

"Yes, I must, I must! One morning I received a strange letter, bearing signature, in which the writer said that if I wished to see my husband I had only to go to a certain address, Brentville, N. H. The letter went to say that Mr. Aaron Boynton was as—though he had a bit of the hero in him, at bottom, too—embracing her just fondly and bristling with warring questions.

"Is she really going to stay with us always, Ivory?" he asked.

"Every day and all the days, every night and all the nights. 'Praise God whom all blessings flow!'" said Ivory, taking off his fur cap and opening the door of the living room. "But we've got to wait for her a whole fortnight, Rod. Isn't that a ridiculous all of a law?"

"Patty didn't wait a fortnight." "Patty never waited for anything," Ivory responded, with a smile. "But we had a good reason, and, alas, we didn't, or they'll say that we haven't, and I am very grateful to the same as little Patty, for when she got herself a husband she found me a wife!" Rodman did not wholly understand this, but felt that there were many mysteries attending the love affairs of our own people that were too complicated for him to grasp, and it did not seem to be just the right moment for questions.

Waitstill and Ivory went into Mrs. Boynton's room quietly, hand in hand, and when she saw Waitstill she raised herself from her pillow and held out her arms with a soft cry of delight. "I haven't had you for so long, so long!" she said, touching the girl's cheek with her frail hand.

"She is coming to live with us, dear. Come in, Rod, and hear me tell her. Waitstill is coming to live with us. Isn't that a beautiful thing to happen in this dreary house?" asked Ivory, needing to take his mother's hand. "Don't you remember what you ought the first time I ever came here, mother?" and Waitstill lifted her head and looked at Mrs. Boynton with trembling eyes and lips that trembled. "Ivory is making it all come true, and I shall be your daughter!"

"Let the house of Aaron now say that his mercy endureth forever!" he said slowly and reverently. And Ivory, with all his heart, responded, "Amen!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Aaron's Rod.

IVORY! Ivory!" Ivory stirred in a sleep that had been troubled by too great happiness. To travel a dreary path alone, a path leading seemingly nowhere, and then suddenly to have a companion by one's side, the very sight of whom enchanted the eye, the very touch of whom delighted the senses—what joy unspeakable! Who could sleep soundly when wakeful and longed for nothing so much as to speak with me, but there were reasons why he did not wish to return to Edgewood. Would I come to him without delay?"

Ivory now sat straight in his chair and listened keenly, feeling that this was to be no vague, uncertain and misleading memory, but something true and tangible.

"The letter excited me greatly after your father's long absence and silence. I knew it could mean nothing but sorrow; but, although I was half ill at the time, my plain duty was to go, so I thought to go without making any explanation in the village."

All this was new to Ivory, and he hung upon his mother's words, dreading yet hoping for the light that they might shed upon the past.

"I arrived at Brentville quite exhausted with the journey and weighed down by anxiety and dread. I found the house mentioned in the letter at 7 o'clock in the evening and knocked at the door. A common, hard featured woman answered the knock and, seeming to expect me, ushered me in. I do not remember the room; I remember only a child leaning patiently against the window sill looking out into the dark and that the place was bare and cheerless.

"I came to call upon Mr. Aaron Boynton," I said, with my heart sinking lower and lower as I spoke. The woman opened a door into the next room, and when I walked in, instead of seeing your father, I confronted a haggard, death stricken young woman sitting up in bed, her great eyes bright with pain, her lips as white as her hollow cheeks and her long black hair streaming over the pillow. The very sight of her struck a knell to the little hope I had of soothing your father's sick bed and forgiving him if he had done me any wrong.

"Well, you came, as I thought you would," said the girl, looking me over from head to foot in a way that somehow made me burn with shame. "Now, sit down in that chair and hear what I've got to say while I've got the strength to say it. I haven't the time nor the desire to put a gloss on it. Aaron Boynton isn't here, as you plainly see, but that's not my fault, for he belongs here as much as anywhere, though he wouldn't have much interest in a dying woman. If you have suffered on account of him so have I, and you haven't had this pain boring into you and eating your life away for months, as I have."

"I pitied her, she seemed so distraught, but I was in terror of her all the same and urged her to tell her story calmly and I would do my best to hear it in the same way."

"'Calm,' she exclaimed, 'with this agony tearing me to pieces! Well, to make beginning and end in one, Aaron Boynton was my husband for three years.'

"I caught hold of the chair to keep myself from falling and cried, 'I do not believe it!' 'Believe it or not,' she answered scornfully, 'it makes no difference to me, but I can give you twenty proofs in as many seconds. We met at a Cochrane meeting, and he chose me from all the others as his true wife. For two years we traveled together, but long before they came to an end there was no happiness for either of us. He had a conscience—not much of a one, but just enough to keep him miserable. At last I felt he was not believing the doctrines he preached, and I caught him trying to get news of you and your boy just because you longer I've warned him and I warn you that I'll end it myself, and if you don't take the boy I'll do the same for him. He's a good sight better off dead than knocking about the world alone. He's innocent, and there's no sense in his being punished for the sins of other folks."

"I see it all. Why did I never think of it before, my poor, poor Rod!" said Ivory, clenching his hands and burying his head in them.

"Don't grieve, Ivory. It has all turned out so much better than we could have hoped. Just listen to the end. She was frightful to hear and to look at, the girl was, though all the time I could feel that she must have had a gypsy beauty and vigor that answered to something in your father."

"Go along out now!" she cried suddenly. 'I can't stand anybody near. The doctor never gives me half enough medicine, and for the hour before he comes I fairly die for lack of it, though little he cares. Go upstairs and have your sleep, and tomorrow you can make up your mind.'

"You don't leave me much freedom to do that," I tried to answer, but she interrupted me, rocking her body to and fro. "Neither of us will ever see Aaron Boynton again—you no more than I. He's in the west, and a man with two families and no means of providing for them doesn't come back where he's known. Come and take her away, Eliza! Take her away, quick!" she called.

"I stumbled out of the room, and the woman waved me upstairs. 'You must not mind, Hetty,' she apologized. 'She never had a good disposition at the best, but she's frantic with the pain now, and good reason, too. It's about over, and I'll be thankful when it is. You'd better swallow the shame and take the child. I can't and won't have him, and it'll be easy enough for you to say he belongs to some of your own folks.'

"By this time I was mentally bewildered. When the iron first entered my soul, when I first heard the truth about your father, at that moment my mind gave way—I know it now."

"Poor, poor mother! My poor, gentle little mother!" murmured Ivory brokenly as he stroked her hand.

"Don't cry, my son; it is all past—the sorrow and the bitterness and the struggle. I will just finish the story, and then we'll close the book forever. The woman gave me some bread and tea, and I flung myself on the bed without undressing. I don't know how long afterward it was, but the door opened and a little boy stole in, a sad, strange, dark eyed little boy who said: 'Can I sleep up here? Mother's screaming and I'm afraid.' He climbed up to the couch. I covered him with a blanket, and I soon heard his deep breathing. But later in the night, when I must have fallen asleep myself, I suddenly awoke and felt him lying beside me. He had dragged the blanket along and crept up on the bed to get close to my side for the warmth I could give or the comfort of my nearness. The touch of him almost broke my heart. I could not push the little creature away when he was lying there so near and warm and confiding—he, all unconscious of the agony his mere existence was to me. I must have slept again, and when the day broke I was alone. I thought the presence of the child in the night was a dream, and I could not remember where I was or why I was there."

"Mother, dear mother, don't tell me any more tonight. I fear for your another in the table drawer for me to mix for her toward morning. She was helpless to move, we thought, but all the same she must have got out of bed when my back was turned and taken the powder dry on her tongue, for it was gone when I looked for it. It didn't hasten things much, and I don't blame her. If ever there was a wild, reckless creature it was Hetty Rodman. But I, who am just the opposite, would have done the same if I'd been her."

"She hurriedly gave me a cup of coffee and, putting a coat and a cap on the boy, literally pushed me out of the house. 'I've got to report things to the doctor,' she said, 'and you're better out of the way. Go down that side street to the station, and mind you say the boy belonged to your sister, who died and left him to you. You're a Cochraneite, ain't you? So was Hetty, and they're all sisters, so you'll be telling no lies. Goodby, Rodman. Be a good boy and don't be any trouble to the lady.'

"How I found the station I do not know, nor how I made the journey, nor where I took the stagecoach. The snow began to fall, and by noon there was a drifting storm. I could not remember where I was going nor who the boy was, for just as the snow was whirling outside so it was whirling in my brain."

"Mother, I can hardly bear to hear any more. It is too terrible!" cried Ivory, rising from his chair and pacing the floor.

"I can recall nothing of any account till I awoke in my own bed weeks afterward. The strange little boy was there, but Mrs. Day and Dr. Perry told me what I must have told them—that he was the child of my dead sister. Those were the last words uttered by the woman in Brentville. I carried them straight through my illness and brought them out on the other side more firmly entrenched than ever."

"If only the truth had come back to you sooner!" sighed Ivory, coming back to her bedside. "I could have helped you to bear it all these years. Sorrow and slowly and reverently. And Ivory, with all his heart, responded, "Amen!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Aaron's Rod.

"IVORY! Ivory!"

Ivory stirred in a sleep that had been troubled by too great happiness. To travel a dreary path alone, a path leading seemingly nowhere, and then suddenly to have a companion by one's side, the very sight of whom enchanted the eye, the very touch of whom delighted the senses—what joy unspeakable! Who could sleep soundly when wakefulness brought a train of such blissful thoughts?

"Ivory! Ivory!"

He was fully awake now, for he new his mother's voice. In all the years, ever thoughtful of his comfort and of the constant strain upon his strength, Lois had never wakened her on at night.

"Coming, mother, coming!" he said, when he realized she was calling him. And, hastily drawing on some clothing, for the night was bitterly cold, he came out of his room and saw his mother standing at the foot of the fairway with a lighted candle in her hand.

"Can you come down, Ivory? It is a strange hour to call you, but I have something to tell you—something I have been piecing together for weeks, something I have just clearly remembered."

"If it's something that won't keep all morning, mother, you creep back to bed and we'll hear it comfortably," he said, coming downstairs and leading her to her room. "I'll smooth the covers, so; beat up the pillows—here!—and throw another log on the sitting room fire. Now, what's the matter? Couldn't you sleep?"

"All summer long I have been trying to remember something—something true that you have been believing, some falsehood for which I was responsible. I have pursued and pursued it, but it has always escaped me. Now it was clear as daylight, for Rodman read me from the Bible a plain answer to all the questions that tormented me."

"That must have been the night that he fainted," thought Ivory.

"When I awoke next morning from my long sleep the old puzzle had come back a thousand times worse than before, for then I knew that I had held the clew in my own hand and had lost it."

Now, praise God, I know the truth, and you, the only one to whom I can tell it, are close at hand!"

Ivory looked at his mother and saw at the veil that had separated them mentally seemed to have vanished in a night that had passed. Often and often it had blown away, as it were, for the fraction of a moment and then blown back again. Now her eyes met his with an altogether new clearness at startled him, while her breath came with ease and she seemed stronger than for many days.

"You remember the winter I was here at the farm alone when you were at the academy?"

"Yes. It was then that I came home and found you so terribly ill. Do you think we need go back to that old time, mother dear?"

"Yes, I must, I must! One morning I received a strange letter, bearing no name, in which the writer said that I wished to see my husband I had to go to a certain address in Brentville, N. H. The letter went on saying that Mr. Aaron Boynton was ill and begged me to keep the chair to keep myself from falling and cried, 'I do not believe it!' 'Believe it or not,' she answered scornfully, 'it makes no difference to me, but I can give you twenty proofs in as many seconds. We met at a Cochrane meeting, and he chose me from all the others as his true wife. For two years we traveled together, but long before they came to an end there was no happiness for either of us. He had a conscience—not much of a one, but just enough to keep him miserable. At last I felt he was not believing the doctrines he preached, and I caught him trying to get news of you and your boy just because you were out of reach, and neglecting my boy and me, who had given up everything to wander with him and live on whatever the brethren and sisters chose to give us.'

"So there was a child, a boy!" Ivory gasped. "Did—did he live?" "He's in the next room," she answered, "and it's him I brought you here for. Aaron Boynton has served us both the same. He left you for me and me for heaven knows who. If I could live I wouldn't ask any favors, of you least of all, but I haven't a penny in the world, though I shan't need one very long. My friend that's nursing me hasn't a roof to her head, and she wouldn't share it with the boy if she had—she's a bigoted orthodox."

"But what do you expect me to do?" Ivory asked angrily, for she was stabbing me with every word.

"The boy is your husband's child, and he always represented you as a saint upon earth. I expect you to take him home and provide for him. He doesn't mean very much to me—just enough so that I don't relish his going to the poorhouse, that's all."

"He'll go to something very like that if he comes to mine," Ivory said.

"Don't worry me with talk, for I can't stand it," she wailed, clutching at her nightgown and flinging back her hair. "Either you take the child or I send somebody to Edgewood with him, somebody to tell the whole story."

"My poor, poor Rod!"

Some of the Cochranes can support him if you won't, or, at the worst, Aaron Boynton's town can take care of his son. The doctor has given me two days to live. If it's a minute

"There is only a little more and the weight will be off my heart and on yours, my poor son. Would that I need not tell you! The house was still, and I thought at first that no one was awake, but when I opened the sitting room door the child ran toward me and took my hand as the woman came in from the sickroom. 'Go into the kitchen, Rodman,' she said, 'and lace up your boots. You're going right out with this lady. Hetty died in the night,' she continued impassively. 'The doctor was here about 10 o'clock, and I've never seen her so bad. He gave her a big dose of sleeping powder and out Sorrow is so much lighter when you can share it with some one else. And the girl who died was called Hetty Rodman, then, and she simply gave the child her last name?"

"Yes, poor, suffering creature. I feel no anger against her now—it has burned itself all away—nor do I feel any bitterness against your father. I forgot all this miserable story for so long, loving and watching for him all the time, that it is as if it did not belong to my own life, but had to do with some unhappy stranger. Can you forgive, too, Ivory?"

"I can try," he answered. "God knows I ought to be able to if you can!"

CLEAN MILK ECONOMICAL.

The Factors Should Go to Favor Its Production.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

There has been in the past much indifference on the part of consumers with respect to the cleanliness of milk. Too many of them desire to buy milk at a low price and do not give any consideration to quality. Dirty milk may prove expensive as a gift, while clean milk may be economical even at a high price. The cheapest article is often the most expensive. A higher price for clean milk may be cheap insurance against some form of sickness.

The main factors that should go to favor the production of clean, safe

CLEAN, HEALTHY COWS.

milk include clean, healthy cows kept in light, well ventilated stables that may be easily cleaned; a well drained barnyard; thoroughly sterilized utensils and healthy milkers that milk with dry hands; a small top milking pail; a separate house for handling the milk; an abundant supply of pure water. The temperature at which the milk is kept is also an important feature, as bacteria multiply very rapidly when the temperature is above 50 degrees F. The milk should be cooled immediately after milking to 50 degrees F. or lower and stored until delivered at a low

And when I say this I am speaking from real experience. On our farm we have thirty-five ewes. We always winter that many. Then we keep a thoroughbred buck. We breed so that our lambs come in March.

"A year ago last fall our sheep money was $200. This we could almost call clear gain; at least it was almost self made money, made while we slept and while we were busy doing other work on the farm.

"Later in the season when we thought the market suited us we had thirty-five nice lambs to sell. The money we got for them was made from material which would otherwise have gone to waste, and it was made almost without any effort or cost on our part. Then the ewes and ram, in the wool crop, will just about even up with you every year for their keeping. So we have come to call the sheep money the easiest clear money on the farm.

"Every farmer with forty acres or more should always have some sheep. Go at it according to the capacity of your fence corners and other little nooks and places of nipping for keeping them without special feeding."

Time Is Essential.

The need of time in the laying and breeding stock ration is very important. In one dozen ordinary sized eggs there are nearly four ounces of lime. This element is best supplied by giving cracked oyster shell in hoppers. Skim milk also provides life to a certain extent in palatable form, and alfalfa and clover are satisfactory sources of supplying lime.

LIVE STOCK AND DAIRY.

Stirring and pouring the freshly drawn milk will reduce in part the peculiar odor present in quality, and with more good butter on the market the more is consumed.

Fall pigs after weaning should be given food to keep them growing when cold weather sets in. Pumpkins will be a good feed for pigs in early winter.

WHAT THE EYES TELL.

If you would guess something of the real nature of any one then study the eyes.

The eyes should be distant from one another the length of one eye. If they are wide apart it is a sign of slowness of understanding; if nearer together, of slyness.

Dark, sparkling eyes, with a serious mouth, show taste, refinement and good judgment.

Another token of these same qualities is to have the eyelids sharply cut, shading at least half the upper part of the eye.

Half closed eyes betoken natural acuteness, but a lack of real sincerity.

Persons of ability and prudence usually have slow moving eyes. They very often possess gray eyes.

Blue eyes are a sign of being of an enthusiastic turn of mind.

Brown eyes show a kindly disposition, while black eyes signify a rash and impetuous one.

Eyes with long corners and thick lids that cover half the pupil invariably show a person of talent.

ENGAGED PEOPLE.

Common Sense Versus Sentiment in Regard to Their Dancing.

"There's a dog in the manger for you," said an old man not long since at a dance. He pointed to a couple standing against the wall. The girl was looking with longing eyes at the waltzers, and the man by her side stared moodily at her. "He doesn't dance himself, and he won't let his sweetheart do it because he can't dance with her. He's a foolish fellow to make her look upon him as a bar to an innocent pleasure. If he doesn't look out he'll end by making her wonder which she prefers—amusement or a tyrant."

It is a common thing to find engaged people protesting against dancing.

"You won't dance again, will you, dear, now we are engaged? I couldn't bear to see you with another fellow."

As a rule, it is the man who raises objections of this kind, not the girl. She does not mind if he dances with other girls so long as he gives her a due proportion of his dances. It is he who likes to see her sitting out and refusing all other men when she is not dancing with himself. It gives him a delightful feeling of ownership, and he does not stop to consider whether the motive is not a selfish one. To most girls who dance it is the mere motion and exhilaration of the exercise that appeals. They care little about the partner except that he dances well. As to the supposition that she will care less for the man she has chosen as a partner for life because she takes other partners for a waltz, the idea is absurd.

NURSERY HAIRBRUSHES.

They Must Be Kept Immaculately Clean to Insure a Healthy Scalp.

Far too little attention is paid both to the quality of the hairbrush and its condition in the majority of nurseries. When the child has a fair amount of hair it is of the utmost benefit that a brush of really good quality should be

COATS FOR GIRL

FUR IS A FAVORED TRIMM

Velvets and Woolens in Novelty Materials Are Among Fabrics Liked—Bright Colors and Fancy Tones—Belted Effects Popular.

Modifications of the redingote as coats with loose backs similar to those favored by adults are the style that are meeting with most favor children's coats. The set-in sleeve high military or rolling collar are features of the models now shown in the salesrooms, says the Goods Economist.

Fur is being largely used as a trimming this fall. Among the favorites are chinchilla, squirrel, fitch and woney. Some of the dark furs also being used, including Per-

DUVETYN COAT.

Hudson seal, skunk and dyed squirrel. When fur is found too expensive fabrics are employed in a similar manner.

Novelty velvets as well as novelties in bright colors are also popular for collars, cuffs and sleeves for pippings. Fancy buttons looked upon with favor and often used to brighten up what would otherwise be a dark and somber look.

LIVE STOCK AND DAIRY.

Stirring and pouring the freshly drawn milk will reduce in part the peculiar odor present in quality, and with more good butter on the market the more is consumed.

Full pigs after weaning should be given food to keep them growing when cold weather sets in. Pumpkins will be a good feed for pigs in early winter. Feed them shorts daily in their slop while they are growing.

Eight or ten well balanced rations can be made up from the feeds commonly grown on the average corn belt farm. To keep a milk cow working at her best she must be comfortable, and nothing adds to her comfort so much as a well balanced ration.

Using plenty of straw for bedding improves the quality of the manure and keeps the land in good condition, because it provides humus, and humus is necessary to all soils. It also keeps the animals clean and comfortable, and that helps to make them profitable.

While it is true it requires three pounds silage to equal one pound hay in feeding value, because of the large amount of moisture contained in the silage, it has been shown that from an equal quantity of dry matter more milk was obtained from the silage than from corn fodder, corn stover or hay.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Never cut a limb from a fruit tree unless you know just why you do it.

If the rabbits have only gnawed the outer bark wrap the wound with cloth.

Order tulip, hyacinth and other winter and spring flowering bulbs. They do not need to be planted until the last of September or October.

As soon as the leaves fall make hardwood cuttings of the currant about eight inches long and plant them in the garden. They should become well rooted by winter.

The strawberry plants that were caught in small pots sunk in the ground should be examined and if rooted should be severed from the mother plants. Leave them sunk in the soil until freezing weather.

To make the best possible lily bed remove one foot of soil and then cover the soil below with about two inches of dried stable manure, to be had of seedsmen at about $2 per hundred pounds. Turn this under with a garden fork, mixing it well with the soil. Cover this with six inches of coarse sand and on the sand place the lily bulbs, setting them twelve inches or more apart. When the bulbs are all in position cover them with six inches of the top soil, and next spring you will have a bed of lilies to be proud of. Manure must never be used next to the bulbs.

Cure or Kill Trees.

It is very unjust to neighbors to permit trees to grow that are covered with insects or troubled with disease. The disease or insects will spread and finally destroy other trees on the property where they are growing, and the trouble rapidly spreads to neighboring grounds. Either cure or kill. If unable to do the first cut down the trees and burn them, and do it promptly.

As to the position that she will be less for the man she has chosen as a partner for life because she takes other partners for a waltz, the idea is absurd.

NURSERY HAIRBRUSHES.

They Must Be Kept Immaculately Clean to Insure a Healthy Scalp.

Far too little attention is paid both to the quality of the hairbrush and its condition in the majority of nurseries. When the child has a fair amount of hair it is of the utmost benefit that a brush of really good quality should be provided and absolutely essential that it should be perfectly clean. The bristles should be resilient and pliable, as then only will they penetrate the hair and gently stimulate the scalp without scratching it, while the passage through the hair will really cleanse it from dust.

The frequency of washing the brush required depends on the quality of hair the child possesses and also the degree to which it is exposed to dirt and dust. In the country, for instance, a brush will keep much cleaner than in the city, while a child who goes out without a hat or who has long hair, much of which falls below the shelter of headgear, should have its brush washed more frequently in proportion.

Under such circumstances a clean brush should be provided three times a week, and it is an economy to equip the nursery with duplicate brushes so that they can be alternated. Twice a week clean hair brushes should be provided always, and a practical reminder may be given that the cleansing process can be accomplished in a fraction of time and no trouble by the use of ammonia added simply to cold water.

Improving Marsh Soils.

Here is an abbreviated formula for the improvement of marsh soils given in a bulletin of the agricultural experiment station, University of Wisconsin:

Warm them by draining off the excess water.

Plow and cultivate them carefully to prepare a good bed for the seed.

Add the fertilizing elements which are lacking.

Sow only crops which are suited to such soils.

The crops recommended for soils of a swampy nature include corn, potatoes, cabbage, buckwheat and timothy and alsike clover for hay. When the land is first packed and made firm by rolling small grains can be grown. Of these the most satisfactory are, first, wheat and barley and then oats and rye.

A Good Whitewash.

A pound of cheap bar soap dissolved in a gallon of boiling water and added to about five gallons of thick whitewash will give it a gloss like oil paint. Silicate of soda in the proportion of one to ten of whitewash produces a fireproof cement.

Orchard No Place For Hay.

The wise farmer does not try to raise a crop of fruit and a crop of hay from the same land. By so doing he fails to get the best possible results from either. Better put all the attention to the orchard and raise the hay on some other land.

SHILOH
quickly stops coughs, cures colds, and heals the throat and lungs. 25 cents.

DUVETYN COAT.

Hudson seal, skunk and dyed squirrel When fur is found too expensive fur fabrics are employed in a similar manner.

Novelty velvets as well as novelty woollens in bright colors are also employed for collars, cuffs and some times for pipings. Fancy buttons are looked upon with favor and often are used to brighten up what would otherwise be a dark and somber looking garment.

While belts are employed very frequently, in most instances they are made of self material piped in velvet, broadcloth or with some fabric to match the collars and cuffs.

The little gray double breasted coat pictured here is of duvetyne, with a broad band in block printing to take the place of a belt. Bands of the printing also appear upon the sleeves.

To Prevent Curdling.

The reason that eggs curdle when being scrambled is because they are cooked too fast and too long. To prevent this stir the eggs continuously; over a slow fire until they are a soft creamy mass, just thick enough not to flow off the crisp, hot buttered toasts on which they are served.

There are several causes to account for the whites of eggs curdling while being whipped. This generally happens if weak, stale eggs are used, the whites of which are very watery.

Curdling is often the result of beating a meringue all over the bowl instead of keeping it well in the center. Particles of the meringue remain separate, the small cells burst and when mixed in with the remainder of the mixture cause the whole to become soft. Beat slowly at first and increase the speed as the substance becomes firm.

Milk or cream when used in combination with tomato can be kept from curdling by adding a bit of bicarbonate of soda before mixing. A small quantity of bicarbonate of soda stirred into milk or cream will keep it from curdling in hot weather.

Hats and the Coiffure.

Arranging the coiffure suitably for the small fall hats is a matter of moment, and the popular swirl effect which draws the hair over across one entire side of the head is one that has met with approval, as its flat, even line conforms to the general appearance of these hats.

Removing Grass Stains.

Alcohol is the best agent for removing grass stains, but it should be applied as soon as possible after the garment has become stained. Rub until it seems to be loosened; then wash with soap and water in the usual way.

Just Run Into It.

Elements mix in a railroad station, but that of humor predominates. The other day a man entered the Grand Central hurriedly. He afterward explained he had to meet a country cousin coming in. He rushed over to a friend who knew of his errand.

"Am I late?" he asked.

"No; the train just ran into the station," he was told.

"Ran into it?" he blurted. "Was anybody hurt?"—New York Tribune.

GOOD RETURNS FROM SHEEP.

Every Farmer With Forty Acres Is Advised to Keep a Flock.

"Keep all the sheep your pasture will support," says a contributor to Farm and Fireside. "And for sheep pasture you can count every nook, fence corner and briar thicket where no other stock will do any good. Sheep can be relied on not only to help clean up the farm, but to gather up young weeds, briars, fence corner grass and thistles and actually turn them into your bank account or your pocketbook."

WHEN YOU GO TO BE PHOTOGRAPHED.

Black should not be worn if avoidable. It produces a hard, dense effect.

A smile should never be forced. If it is not natural it will look either stiff or affected.

Don't expect a good photograph if you are taken when feeling tired or ill. Every line will be accentuated and out of proportion.

Lace is most becoming and softens the line between the dress and the skin.

If the eyes are weak or the nose irregular try a three-quarter rather than a full face study.

A well lighted but cloudy day is kinder to one's small defects than one of blinding sunlight.

Be as natural and as quiet as possible, and choose a pose that will bring out your best points.

Don't wear "the very latest," for it will date your picture and look ridiculous some day. Choose the simplest style, one that will be artistic rather than fashionable.

It is as well to know that blue photographs white, red looks black, and light yellow and pink appear as varying tones of gray, so the choice of one's costume is important. A white frock is very trying, except for a very young or pretty girl.

As a rule, the head and shoulders make a prettier picture than a full length portrait.

Finally, don't blame the photographer for a poor result if his directions have not been followed and his suggestions have been neglected.

CHILDREN'S LINGERIE.

Tiny Boys and Girls Wear Very Similar Undergarments.

Small boys and girls wear very similar undergarments above their combinations—a little "health bodice" of white jean, stitched, but not stiffened, and buttoning either at front or back and with buttons at the waist to which the knickers are attached, these of cream or navy serge with detachable cotton linings, the only difference being that the boy's short knickers are straight, the girl's fuller and drawn in above the knee, not tightly, with an elastic runner.

In warm weather Japanese silk is delightful for little girls—as cool as and far more hygienic than cambric and more easily washed—and these dainty knickers can be finished with hemstitched frills, which are preferable to lace. Drilling linen or tussah is nicest for boys.

"Having been a great sufferer from Asthma for a period of fifteen years (sometimes having to sit up at night for weeks at a time) I began the use of 'Fruit-a-tives'. These wonderful tablets relieved me of Indigestion, and through the continued use of same, I am no longer distressed with that terrible disease, Asthma, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives' which are worth their weight in gold to anyone suffering as I did. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from Asthma, which I believe is caused or aggravated by Indigestion".

DAMASK TABLECLOTHS.

Old Ones May Be Used In Making Fancy Articles.

Old damask tablecloths may have their usefulness extended. One housekeeper did it in the following way: She saw that the design was an ideal one for a picture holder, pillow cover, table cover and other things. She first made a picture frame, thinking that she would trace the damask design to the material, pad it and work it the usual way, but she finally decided that it would be easier to work right over the damask, thus saving time, insuring accuracy and furnishing the padding at the same time.

So she basted the damask design on a piece of light colored satin, covered the roses and leaves with the usual colors with the embroidery stitch, following the pattern as carefully as a stamped one.

When all the damask design was covered she cut off the exposed damask carefully. The satin then presented an

DUVETYN COAT.

Hudson seal, skunk and dyed squirrel. When fur is found too expensive fur fabrics are employed in a similar manner.

Novelty velvets as well as novelty woollens in bright colors are also employed for collars, cuffs and sometimes for pipings. Fancy buttons are looked upon with favor and often are used to brighten up what would otherwise be a dark and somber looking garment.

While belts are employed very frequently, in most instances they are made of self material piped in velvet, broadcloth or with some fabric to match the collars and cuffs.

The little gray double breasted coat pictured here is of duvetyne, with a broad band in block printing to take the place of a belt. Bands of the printing also appear upon the sleeves.

To Prevent Curdling.

The reason that eggs curdle when being scrambled is because they are cooked too fast and too long. To prevent this stir the eggs continuously over a slow fire until they are a soft, creamy mass, just thick enough not to flow off the crisp, hot buttered toast on which they are served.

There are several causes to account for the whites of eggs curdling while being whipped. This generally happens if weak, stale eggs are used, the whites of which are very watery.

Curdling is often the result of beating a meringue all over the bowl instead of keeping it well in the center. Particles of the meringue remain separate, the small cells burst and when mixed in with the remainder of the mixture cause the whole to become soft. Beat slowly at first and increase the speed as the substance becomes firm.

Milk or cream when used in combination with tomato can be kept from curdling by adding a bit of bicarbonate of soda before mixing. A small quantity of bicarbonate of soda stirred into milk or cream will keep it from curdling in hot weather.

Hats and the Coiffure.

Arranging the coiffure suitably for the small fall hats is a matter of moment, and the popular swirl effect which draws the hair over across one entire side of the head is one that has met with approval, as its flat, even line conforms to the general appearance of these hats.

Removing Grass Stains.

Alcohol is the best agent for removing grass stains, but it should be applied as soon as possible after the garment has become stained. Rub until it seems to be loosened; then wash with soap and water in the usual way.

Just Run Into It.

Elements mix in a railroad station, but that of humor predominates. The other day a man entered the Grand Central hurriedly. He afterward explained he had to meet a country cousin coming in. He rushed over to a friend who knew of his errand.

"Am I late?" he asked.

"No; the train just ran into the station," he was told.

"Ran into it?" he blurted. "Was anybody hurt?"—New York Tribune.

SUGGESTIONS FOR HOUSE GARMENTS.

CREPE DE CHINE HOUSE DRESS.

The pretty house dress pictured here is of taupe crepe de chine. It has the loose straight effect with low waistline. The very wide girdle is of figured satin ribbon.

A pretty and simply made negligee of crepe de chine has a yoke and is softly outlined by a ruching at neck and sleeves. On both sides it is slightly draped and finished with a pink bow. This model may be had in pink and blue.

An attractive "Castle" cap of fine shadow lace is trimmed at the sides with rosebuds and in front by a pretty satin bow.

Let Pies Boil Over.

Fruit pies can be prevented from boiling over while baking if you add one tablespoonful of cornstarch to the fruit. Sweeten the fruit to taste, add the cornstarch and heat before adding the crust.

Cause For Surprise.

A fool and his money are parted quite soon.
Is as true as a shoe's made of leather,
But the thing that surprises us most is the fact
How the two get so often together.

—Yonkers Statesman.

His Precautions.

"How can such a good man as he is take a fee when he knows it is tainted money?"

"Oh, he always uses an antiseptic solution before handling the fee."—Baltimore American.

A vote of thanks was rendered Mr. Hall for the explanations given.

material, paid it and work it the usual way, but she finally decided that it would be easier to work right over the damask, thus saving time, insuring accuracy and furnishing the padding at the same time.

So she basted the damask design on a piece of light colored satin, covered the roses and leaves with the usual colors with the embroidery stitch, following the pattern as carefully as a stamped one.

When all the damask design was covered she cut off the exposed damask carefully. The satin then presented an exquisite wreath of roses standing out distinctly. As an experiment she made a tiny edge of buttonhole stitch around the entire outline, not catching up the satin. This would only be necessary when it is difficult to cut the damask as close as desired. The work was then mounted on a circular cardboard, and the result was a handsome frame.

Transfer a damask pattern to almost any cushion material and you will have a dainty cushion and one that isn't the model of your neighbor's. There is no limit to the uses and combinations arising from this method. Never throw away tray cloths, napkins or tablecloths of damask, no matter how much they are worn.

MULTIPLE PERSONALITY.

One Englishwoman Who Showed Five Distinct Natures.

Rare cases of true multiple personality are known to have occurred and are of extraordinary interest. The most famous is that of "Miss Beauchamp"—the real name has always most properly been withheld—which was carefully studied by Dr. Morton Prince. By intricate steps he arrived at the conviction that in her case no fewer than five distinct personalities could be traced. The most vivid of all was the one who called herself "Sally."

The normal Miss Beauchamp was a somewhat neurotic woman, the constant prey of slight ailments and without much zest in life. After a nervous shock Sally suddenly became able to take possession of her from time to time, at first with apparent difficulty and then, as it seemed, whenever she pleased. When Sally was dominant Miss Beauchamp's whole nature was changed. She became lively, irresponsible, fond of all the violent exercises which the normal woman disliked, exuberantly healthy and different from Miss Beauchamp in every respect. She could not explain herself, but protested that she had "always been here," but could not get control, and one of the most wonderful and best attested facts in this mysterious case is that she confidently asserted her memory of events which occurred when the real Miss Beauchamp was in her cradle.

For Miss Beauchamp, the co-tenant with her of the same body, Sally had the most intense dislike, never speaking of her except with contempt and doing all she could to cause her harm and annoyance. Miss Beauchamp had a special horror of insects and reptiles, and Sally was accustomed to gratify her spite by collecting frogs, toads and spiders and dispatching them to what the inadequacy of language compels us to call herself.

Miss Beauchamp detested walking, so Sally, when she was dominant, would go for a long tramp after carefully leaving all her money behind, and then, when she was ten miles or more from home, would suddenly disappear and, allowing the original Miss Beauchamp to assume control, leave the unfortunate woman to make her way back as best she could.—London Globe.

J. C. Granger, died suddenly at Strathcona, on Saturday last. He was born in 1853. He was village librarian, also postmaster, and an ardent worker in St. Jude's church.
His widow is the daughter of the late Thomas Flynn, Napanee.

Mr. Ross Guess, of the Bank of Montreal, Liethbridge, Alta., youngest son of Mr. C. W. Guess, Napanee, was married at Edmonton, Alberta, on Tuesday, November 17th, to Elsie Novo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.
Turner. Mr. Guess' many Napanee friends wish him much joy.

Arthur Kelly, son of Andrew Kelly, formerly of Napanee, died very suddenly on Saturday last at Wallace-burg. Deceased was returning from work and while crossing a bridge fell off into the water and was drowned.
He was subject to these spells having had several previously. The remains were brought to Napanee for interment.

Rev. Canon Bogert died at his home in Belleville on Thursday of last week.
He was ordained deacon in 1865, and priest in 1866. After serving in parishes at Tetley, Napanee, Selby and Salmon River, he became rector of St. John's Church, West Belleville, in 1883, being its second and last rector, as this church was closed a year and a half ago, owing to his ill-health, and was removed to Point Anne.

What might have been a serious accident happened on Friday afternoon last, at Boyle & Son's store house on the canal. Mr. Lasher James was pulling detonators out of a box, and in laying one of them on the floor the wire came in contact with a battery standing near, exploding the detonator in his hand injuring his fingers.
Quite a number of detonators were in the box and some dynamite was also near by and had the box of detonators and dynamite been exploded nothing would have been left of man or shed.

The death occurred in New York city hospital, on Nov. 14th, of Miss Alice Patterson, as the result of appendicitis. She was a daughter of J.
Patterson, Moscow, and was engaged as a nurse in New York. She was operated on on Thursday and died on Saturday. The funeral took place the following Thursday from the home of her brother, J. Patterson, to Moscow church and thence to White church cemetery. Rev. D. P. Wilson, of Yarker, officiated at the funeral. The many beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held. The pall-bearers were Messrs. James Lucas, Horatio Bell, Coleman Switzer, Marshall Milsap, Joseph Foster and Henry Huffman.

On Monday afternoon Master Stanley Kinkley met with an accident which will probably cost him the use of one of his arms. With Chas.
Norris he was out shooting and the boys had constructed a shelter of juniper bushes. In the centre of the shelter they built a fire and placed their guns under the bushes. By some means their shelter got on fire and beyond control of the boys.
Young Kinkley rescued Norris' gun from the flames and was getting his own when it is supposed the trigger caught on a limb of the bush and discharged the contents into his shoulder. Medical attention was at once secured and the shot extracted, but the bone is so badly smashed that it is doubtful if he will ever have the use of his arm again.

Trinity Church Notes.

Rev. C. E. Manning, assistant secretary of Missions preached two able and intensely interesting sermons on Sunday on the missionary question.
Notwithstanding the special services in all the churches the congregations were good and the response to the appeal on behalf of missions very gratifying. The Church will reach, if not go beyond the amount of last year.
A splendid audience that filled the Sunday school hall greeted Rev. Byron H. Stauffer on Monday evening when he lectured under the auspices of the Young People's Association on "The Funny Pennsylvania Dutchman." On Sunday evening next the pastor will speak on some of the beneficent results that will be the outcome of the war. The choir will furnish patriotic music.

SUPREME COURT.

The non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court were held on Tuesday, Mr.
Justice Britton presiding. There was only one case for trial. Mrs. C. M.
Howard, of Amherst Island, brought an action against her sons, George Frederick Howard and Percy Mortimer Howard, as executors, and Percy Mortimer Howard personally, to recover her maintenance devised to her by her husband's will and charged upon the lands devised to her son, Percy M. Howard, claiming that she had not been properly maintained and further that she was entitled to be maintained while living, off the said lands. Judgment was given, declaring the plaintiff entitled to her maintenance off the said lands and claim fixed at $17.00 per month payable the first of every month, beginning on December 1st inst., exclusive of medical attendance, etc., the same to Grace Methodist Church.

"Go to Church" Sunday in Grace
Methodist church was a marked success, due to the earnest and hearty cooperation of the quarterly official board. At the November board meeting the appointment was divided into twenty-two districts, a special card of invitation printed, and a thorough cavass made of the entire congregation, with this result that the congregation in the morning was increased two and a half times the regular, over 650 being present; while the night congregation was the largest during the present pastorate between 800 and 850 being in actual attendance. The attendance at the Sunday school was greatly increased, 433 being present—22 more than on Rally Day. As a result of the success of Sunday last the official board intend observing a
"Go-to-Church" Sunday annually.
